FOR GOING TO THE ROOT.

Vol. X. No. 43.

January, 12th 1924.

WEEKLY.

WILL THERE BE A CENTURY OF STAGNATION? REPLY TO MR. RAMSAY MACDONALD BY SYLVIA PANKHURST.

Mr. MacDonald, in the New Leader, predicts a century in which public opinion will remain practically stationary, and no great social changes will occur.

" If we adopt proportional representation," he says, "we may not have one majority in a century." He adds: "Everything points to a continued stalemate."

The New Leader editorial, commenting on Mr. MacDonald's article "with peculiar pleasure" emphasises his statement by remarking: "Labour will probably be in Office some months; a Liberal or a Tory administration may follow it."

Mr. MacDonald's article studiously discountenances the view that we are entering a period of speedy progress, that the workers are rising to their emancipation, that the downfall of class society is at hand. He indicates that popular opinion will remain oscillating between the various aspects of capitalist politics making no move towards a new social order. He seems even to discountenance the possibility of a new social order, and to put it out of court as the goal towards which the Labour Party should aim. He suggests that during a lengthy period, even a hundred years, parties "will rule in the House of Commons, more by their administrative success than by party force." Though Mr. MacDonald says: "On balance that will be good," because it will make parties " more public servants than public dictators," his statement also certainly means that he anticipates few, if any, important legislative changes during the long period of "stalemate" he has predicted.

Amazingly, Mr. MacDonald seems undismayed by his anticipation of a century of stagnation. Indeed, he seems inclined to safeguard that stagnation, for he expresses anxiety, not to dispel it, but to limit the frequency of General Elections.

He suggests that it may be necessary to fix a minimum period for the life of a Parliament, within which no Dissolution can take place. The minimum, he proposes, is three years. As an alternative, he suggests, that the Prime Minister might be prevented from advising a Dissolution of Parliament, except after an affirmative vote of the House of Commons. Having made these suggestions very tentatively, Mr. MacDonald, most typically, refuses to sponsor them, and expresses a provisional sort of confidence that Prime Ministers will restrain themselves from advising Dissolutions too lightly. He finally affirms that "until we see a little more clearly how things are to work out, the Prime Minister must retain what he has gained by constitutional practice."

It is strange that we should find the man who anticipates becoming within a few days the first Labour Prime Minister who has ever taken Office in this country, pre-occupying himself with discussing: "How is the nation to be guarded against too frequent Dissolu-tions!"

Such words as the following come strangely, indeed, from the pen of the expectant Labour Prime Minister:

resigned, what would happen? I do not the House of Commons. know. Everything would depend on cir- We differ absolutely from Mr. MacDonald for their leader to be sent for is certainly Party will shortly secure a Parliamentary largest party, and they might be sent for, especially if the outgoing Prime Minister were to advise it; a Dissolution might be granted, and who is to say that some new leader might not have arisen in the meantime? "

The italics are ours. Add now these other sentences of Mr. MacDonald's:

"The idea that a Prime Minister can go to the King just when it suits himself, and, within a short time after an Election ask for a Dissolution, is absurd."

The italics are Mr. MacDonald's.

"If . . . the Minister thinks that an Election is necessary and that the country would accept it, it belongs to his responsibility to have his advice in that respect taken, just as if he advises that another party leader should be sent for, his advice in that respect should also be taken."

The italics are ours. Mr. MacDonald appears to be warning the Liberals that if they defeat his expected Government, he may probably advise the King not to put them in Office, but to revert to a Tory Government. Mr. MacDonald claims that the King will be under a constitutional obligation to accept such advice from him, if and when he is the outgoing Prime Minister. Yet earlier in the same article he was denying the right of Mr. Baldwin to exercise a similar discrimination against himself.

Such political fencing is decidedly inconsistent and uninspiring.

We are of those who regard Parliament as a vanishing institution, an institution doomed to disappear. Therefore, we are undismayed by the prospect that Parliament might buttress itself against the pressure of popular influences by enacting that a General Election cannot take place until three years have elapsed. The less responsive Parliament becomes to popular pressure, the more speedily will come the day when, in some wave of popular unrest, the Workers' Councils will shoulder Parliament from the stage of time for ever.

It is, however, surprising to find the Leader of the Labour Party, a loudly professing believer in Parliamentary democracy, thus proposing means to prevent the electorate from being consulted for three years, however obviously the country might disagree with the Government in power."

We are of those who have parted company with Reformism and who count all propaganda effort lost which is not directed towards the complete supercession of Capitalism by a new order. Therefore, we are not distressed that the Reformists should present themselves in unheroic guise.

Nevertheless, we are amazed that the chosen Leader of the Labour Party should content himself with discussing the petty trifles of Parliamentary wire-pulling at this time when the Labour Party is on the eve of securing a Parliamentary majority after a generation of striving. Compare Mr. MacDonald's pronouncement as the "New Leader," with what would have been written by Kier Hardie, Bebel, Liebknecht, or James, under these circumstances.

Mr. MacDonald forecasts a century of "Supposing the Liberals were to defeat a stagnation, in which neither Liberal, Tory, nor Labour Government, and the Government Labour Party will secure a clear majority in cumstances. The Liberal assumption that in that prediction. We believe that if it purthe only thing that could happen would be sues even moderately wise tactics, the Labour erroneous. The Tories would still be the majority. We believe even with the grossest blundering of which Mr. MacDonald is capable, and the most extreme and halting timidity he is able to display, though these may retard and reduce the electoral victory of the Labour Party, a Labour majority at the polls must, nevertheless, inevitably be recorded in the early future. The only thing that could long postpone such a victory would be the advent to power of a Labour Government before a victory at the polls had been secured. Even in that case, we believe a Labour victory at the polls will follow unless circumstances have made it exceptionally clear that the Labour Government has failed because its policies were themselves inadequate, not because it lacked a majority to see them through. Because the Tory-Liberal majority in Parliament is unlikely to give a Labour Government a free hand to do as it please;, the Labour Party, if it is permitted to take office as a minority, will be able to put the blame for its inevitable failure upon other people. Therefore, even though Mr. Mac-Donald should commit the blunder of attempting to administrate without power, the Labour Party will most probably obtain a Labour victory at the polls.

A Labour Party Government, with a Parliamentary majority at its command, will then take Office. Inevitably, it will fail to retain popularity and to bring substantial benefits to the people. It will fail because its proposals are inadequate, contradictory and unpractical, and because it will shrink from seriously attacking vested interests and the private property system.

The failure of the Labour Government, with a Parliamentary majority, may mean a period of apparent reaction. If so, it will be due to the neglect of educational work amongst the masses by those who are able to see further than the programme put forward by the Labour Party. If the masses have been educated by those whose eyes are already open, so that they will be ready, when the Labour Party panaceas are proved futile, to pass on to more advanced ideas, then reaction will not follow the inevitable failure of a Labour Government.

We have only one question to ask of those who are pessimistic and down-hearted because their fellows are backward and advanced ideas spread too slowly. It is this: "What are you doing to educate?"

We have no faith in Parliamentary Socialism. We believe that its doctrines and practice must be out-tired before real progress is made. Nevertheless, that a competent Parliamentary Socialist Leader would refuse to accept Government Office until the electorate had given him a Parliamentary majority. Were he to accept Office, it would be merely to dissolve Parliament.

He would put forward a bold and attractive programme which, though it might be Reformist, would have marked Socialist features. He would endeavour to secure a majority for it in the country.

He would jealously repudiate any suggestion that the Labour Government should be restricted in its right to call for a General Election, as and when it thought fit, and would refuse to make any bargain, either with the King, or anyone else, which would hamper its freedom in that matter. He would repudiate emphatically the claim now made, that the outgoing Prime Minister should decide who shall succeed him and what Party shall replace his own when it goes out of Office.

would do everything in his power to secure are too hide-bound to realise. . . . yet another General Election, and to render it "I wonder what the children think of it? rooms that have been turned into government impossible for any Capitalist Government to Probably they have a clearer idea of where offices and burn all the stupid laws and regula-remain in power. so poor a tactician as to be willing, in the raised at the critical moment might have made take the houses, those who are working in the event of his expected minority Government all the difference. . . . taking Office and meeting defeat, to call either "There is nothing for it but to get busy at know that they are not owners any more, Liberals or Tories to succeed him, instead of once!" advising a Dissolution which might perhaps Flora's action followed with torrential service and consent, as it was in the first days. give him a majority.

however, that he is prepared to accept Office, George had not the remotest idea what she Flora went from door to door, talking thus, even should the condition be made that he was doing. At the printing shop there was She found many of the women already thinkshall not ask for an early Dissolution.

tactics, to be explained only by a pessimistic only were government publications being women in a group of houses, she would return disbelief in the possibility of social change and rushed out at top speed; but also hymn books again, and, if necessary, again, until she had radical improvement.

THE TALE OF AN ISLAND.

(Continued from Last Week.)

George was both astonished and indignant. He tried to rebuke Flora and to explain how these books rather than their money, imagin- comrades in the factories and on the land for unscientific were her opinions; but she stormed ing that they would serve as a charm against joint action. Each of you must be able to on, drowning his protests:

You actually had Socialism, and you let it go! clergy at the services and cut up as copy for The women were as enthusiastic as Flora: those vampires because they had a few bank mount,

George strode out of the house in anger. home—the half room, curtained off from the now made no attempt to contribute to their Flora. So was Lucy Billings, whose father boasted of the brave things they had done in half that was occupied by the Thomas family. joint support. Flora even failed to prepare was so deaf that they could safely talk before It contained a bed and two chairs, a deal table, his meals. She was out of the house before him. Most of the plans were hatched an over-turned packing case, on which was a he awoke each morning, and rarely returned Lucy's half of the little room she and her candle to light the room, and an oil lamp for until after midnight. When he asked her father shared. At last, one afternoon, the cooking by. The electricity had been cut off, where she had been, she made no reply. He scouts collected from the house-mothers th and all the former conveniences removed. A noticed that she always threw herself on the papers telling how many workers were presaucepan and a frying pan hung on nails in bed exhausted when she returned, as though pared to act and how many were reluctant of the wall. There were a few cheap crockery obliged to rest awhile before she could sum- hostile. utensils on the table. These poor furnishings mon the energy to undress. She was usually George had engaged to buy on the hire pur- too tired to eat the food that Mrs. Thomas chase system. He had obtained work as considerately prepared for her. George could soon as he knew Flora would be well enough not help pitying Flora, in spite of himself, to leave the hospital. He had borrowed from although he was so angered at her mysterious an old woman, who had begun business as a conduct that he could scarcely speak. workers. The day before Flora came out of from habit than for his own sake.

regulations. saw that at the rear of the house was a charm- of understanding than their mothers. notices were posted:

"TRESPASSERS WILL BE PROSECUTED."

"THIS LAND TO BE LET OR SOLD." All the working-class houses had thus been deprived of their gardens, and, looking from one to another, Flora readily understood this.

"What we have missed!" she ejaculated, "Surely it cannot be hopeless: "

She sat down on the edge of the bed, thinking eagerly:

He would work for a new Election at the "Surely the women, at least, have felt the "We must all go on a certain day and earliest possible moment, and would strive rapid change acutely! Surely they under- take back the houses and the furniture. We that his Party should secure a majority at the stand what has happened. It ought to be must break down the fences that bar us out polls. Should it fail to secure a majority, he possible to rouse the women, even if the men of the gardens and throw away those horrible things went wrong than their elders. . . . tions.

speed on the heels of her resolve. She was The houses that have been turned into shops Mr. MacDonald appears to be indicating, certainly very busy from that moment; but shall be houses again." accessories had all been lost in the wreck. something should be doing. of the older emigrants, who had preserved household who are at work to prepare their "You had the whole thing in your hands! relics were now taken for the use of the to act with us when the time comes!"

notes in their possession. Bank notes for George said he would speak to the Scotsman's palace sooth! And you've let them make a bank to at the printing shop and get him to take Flora amongst them. "When the storehouse starting. Once the revolt was in full swing, barricaded it as well as they could, hoping that Oh, how could you?" She rung her hands. spurned his offer, declaring that she would not ful slogan. "I feel as though I could never bear to look help the government and the church to dope

George was surprised that Flora, who had mothers told them. Flora looked disdainfully about her new always been self-supporting and independent, Mrs. Mary Thomas was hand in glove with mone, lender, enough money to pay the first. He found himself comparing his wife with of her family who were ready to take part in instalment and to buy a little food. Hitherto, quiet, serviceable Mrs. Thomas, greatly to the revolt, and to warn them that this was the voul!" Joe Thomas and other comrades had provided Flora's disadvantage. Yet there seemed to day. Those who were unwilling, or faint George with food and shelter, because they be an understanding between the two women, hearted, were to be kept at home; by what " by six!" looked up to him as a leader, and felt he was and Mrs. Thomas, though always kind, was means was left to the woman's own initiative. entitled to their support for his work in distinctly reserved towards George, and he Most of the house-mothers were able to send organising the employed and unemployed felt somehow that she was kind to him rather all their household forth in confidence. The hospital, however, George had obtained work All unknown to George, Flora was toiling as odd job man at the island printing shop, strenuously amongst the women, stirring them which was working to its fullest capacity to revolt against the tyranny that was daily turning out the new government's edicts and being more firmly rivetted upon them. She was working also among the children and, as Flora dashed impatiently to the window, and she had expected, she found them even quicker ing garden, well stocked with flowers, "You must talk every night at home," vegetables, and fruit trees heavily laden. This Flora told the children. "You must explain garden had been fenced off, so that it could to your parents how easy it would be to get no longer be entered from the house, and everything back as it was when we first landed. You shall be our scouts and messengers. There will be much for you to do as soon as the action begins."

To the women Flora said: "We must refuse to acknowledge the government, the church, and the property-owners. We must be as we were in the first days after we landed. and hid her face, weeping with rage. Everything must belong to us all. We must Then with returning courage, she added: give up money, and buying and selling; but all of us just use what we want, as we did at first: there is plenty for all, plenty and to sign-boards. We must take back the common

We scarcely think that Mr. MacDonald is "Oh, why wasn't I there! Even one voice "We must all act together. The day we factories and on the land must let the owners and that the work is to be managed by mutual a demand for more women to learn folding, as ing as she did, and most of them quick to Such opportunism would seem to us bad 'the shop was overwhelmed with work. Not respond. When she had called on all the and prayer books for the church, as the Scots- got the women to agree to meet together and man's rule had left no traces of any sort of get to know each other, and to choose one of religion, and the ship's supply of church their number to whom she could send when

Even the clergy had lost their devotional "You must talk to your husbands and sons books; but a few bibles, hymn books, and and daughters and lodgers," she urged the prayer books had been recovered from some women. "You must get all those of your drowning. The tattered little sea-soaked report how many of your household are ready

You threw it away, all of you. You didn't the linotype operators. Some of the old "When the day comes for action," they said, know it when you had it! No police, no people wept at being deprived of what they "those who are not prepared to join us will army, no vested interests, everything common treasured as charms and keepsakes, but the have to be kept at home." The women property, and yet you handed it all over to needs of the church, of course, were para- laughed. They were thinking out many ingenious plans. "Wait till I get my house notes in their possession. Bank notes for- George said he would speak to the foreman back!" became the commonest saying rope: "They might be wanted," their laggards was that they had been prevented

The majority for action was overwhelming. The scouts took out the message: "To-morrow Morning."

Every house-mother who had joined the conspiracy, and few indeed had not, now knew that her business was to awaken early those men in the factories. The strategy was, when their children behaved like this? bring utilities to the nearest houses. nevertheless, faithfully and efficiently carried The great ones seized their telephones, but As for George, he never could bring himof those hostile ones, who were apt to bestir operators had cut the palace off completely. out without waking him, and he had come to under the bed. The wife, whose man was apt people saw them. to be violent, took his clothes away, poured The work of restoration was carried on all of the treacle. In a few cases the neighbours already few. hid away the clothing of a whole family; an easy thing to do, since the families were herded together with only curtains to divide them in many cases. It had been calculated that danger could arise from the doubtful people only at the . This assumption proved correct. When from taking part in the glorious revolt. Some of those who had been kept at home actually

Meanwhile, a confident band of children had gone to the Scotsman's palace, prompted by mischievous curiosity to see how the rulers would accept the overthrow undoubted by the

A noise of shouting and laughter outside the palace aroused the great ones and those of their servants who had not left them to join the revolt. Strange cries in children's voices assailed the disgusted ears of the startled great

Have you joined the snail's club? " 'Look sharp; the foreman is watching for

You will get the sack if you don't clock on

"Come out old guys!"

"Come to work!"

'Our mothers are taking the houses!" Walk into my parlour you old spider! The great ones heard themselves called by ame and by approbrious nicknames.

You are needed behind the plough, old shovel hat. Come and show us your gaiters." departed the night before. e Bishop heard himself thus disrespectfully

Is her ladyship cooking her pearls for The food and fuel were almost gone.

Let me swing on your watchchain, Mr. bishop and the greatest of the bankers.

Why didn't you walk the plank, Mr. desired them to die of hunger. irate? What a pity you left your pistol in

This way, Mr. Footman!"

Oh, my shirt front!" Where's the butler? "

Every sally was followed by bursts of ighter. Youngsters strutted up and down ditating this or that personality amongst the a refuge from the eyes of men. creat ones, while their companions screamed out. Most of the unwilling were merely left there was no response. The operators had self to forgive Flora for leaving him out of the to slumber on, and being undisturbed, they joined the revolt. The Scotsman's system had revolution. As a matter of fact, Mrs. slept till the afternoon, by which time the provided automatic connection between the Thomas had forgotten to call him on the revolt had obviously triumphed. In the case palace and most of the other buildings, but the eventful morning. Flora had taken to going themselves early, clever expedients were Meanwhile, all willing men and women who depend on Mrs. Thomas. When George got devised. Some mothers put the clocks back had a knowledge of some useful trade, up at noon, and found that everything had and took away the clothes of their black sheep. whether they had been employed or un-Some put the clocks forward, and declaring it employed the previous day, had gone to the to be Sunday, busied themselves in cooking the places where the work they were accustomed only proletarian dinner of the week. The to was carried on, and these, with little diswoman told her man that he had been cussion and mutual agreement, had taken up government had been overthrown, Flora would delirious in the night, and that the doctor had each the tasks they were fitted to do. Those probably have settled down with George as said he would die suddenly, if he rose from his who worked in industries which were not an bed within twenty-four hours. Another, immediate need, such as printing, and those George was too deeply offended for that. He knowing her neighbour and his wife to be both whose work qualified them for the task, went untrustworthy, warned them that there was a with the housewives to restore the houses and warrant for their arrest, and induced them to the common rooms to the state in which they ing as she was already engrossed in organiscome to her house and conceal themselves had been found when first the shipwrecked ing a school for the children, whose education treacle on him, and locked him in, having night, and by the evening of the next day became interested in the wife of the great removed all by which he could cleanse himself signs of the private property usurpation were

THE WORKERS' DREADNOUGHT.

> Meanwhile, the great ones had remained terror stricken in the palace. The minor officials and supporters of the usurpation had either joined the revolters against it, or had fled to the woods or the caves by the sea.

sooth! And you've let them make a bank to at the printing shop and get him to back them. How could you be such fools! on to learn folding; but Flora indignantly back them. How could you be such fools! on to learn folding; but Flora indignantly since it was well as they could, hoping that since it was well stocked with food, they The children were busy collecting pieces of the day was won the only complaint from the At first they momentarily expected an attack, but the palace was left unmolested, and even the children's interest in the great ones who had lost their power quickly waned.

Indeed, the palace and its occupants appeared forgotten. One by one the servants who remained to them were stealing out to take their places, as unostentatiously as possible, amongst the working population outside; whilst the fugitives from the woods and caves were also returning and trying to fit into useful ways of life, in the hope that no one would remember they had supported the

when the inhabitants of the palace were growing lean from self-imposed short commons, the smaller fry amongst the great ones also began to steal out of the palace in the night, and did not return. Steadily the exodus continued, fasten her dress at the back. until only the very great were left. They who still clung to the shelter of the palace did not claim his island. His ship went down with know what had become of their companions all aboard her in the same storm that cast who had gone and whom they reviled as George Budd, the bankers, and all the others traitors. Each morning the palace inhabi- on to his island. tants were found to be fewer in number, and those who had disappeared were generally happily ever after. they who had most bitterly denounced the

The wine was drunk to the dregs, the dresses of the few remaining ladies grievously 'Let me look through your eye-glass, Mr. required the attention of their maids, the rooms of the palace were dusty and disordered.

The day came when all had left save the

When their last morsel of food was gone Where are your batons now, Mr. Chief they crept out: two gaunt, terrified old men. In the darkness they did not see that a wagon Those words had an ominous sound. Where, of food was standing at the gateway. It had indeed, were the police to allow this to been placed there by the people outside lest the fallen great ones should need it, for no one

Unaware of the food for which they were craving, the two old men made their way stealthily past the houses, shrinking from every ray of light, trembling at every noise. At the first faint glimmer of dawn they crawled timorously into a disused pig-sty, on the outskirts of the settlement, thankful to find

There they remained for many years, refusing to come out, except at night. Then, precaution of keeping the laggards at home The great ones, watching the scene from the under cover of the darkness, they would was really unnecessary, for the majority for palace windows, were more alarmed than if furtively seize and drag into the recesses of revolt was so great. The few who were un- the entire population had assembled to the sty, the food and comforts, which were willing were mostly either policemen or fore- threaten them. What were the people doing left for them every day by those who came to been arranged without his knowing anything about it, he felt so much offended that he went back to bed until the revolution was over.

Once the pirate property system and its accommodatingly as any other wife, but insisted that they must part.

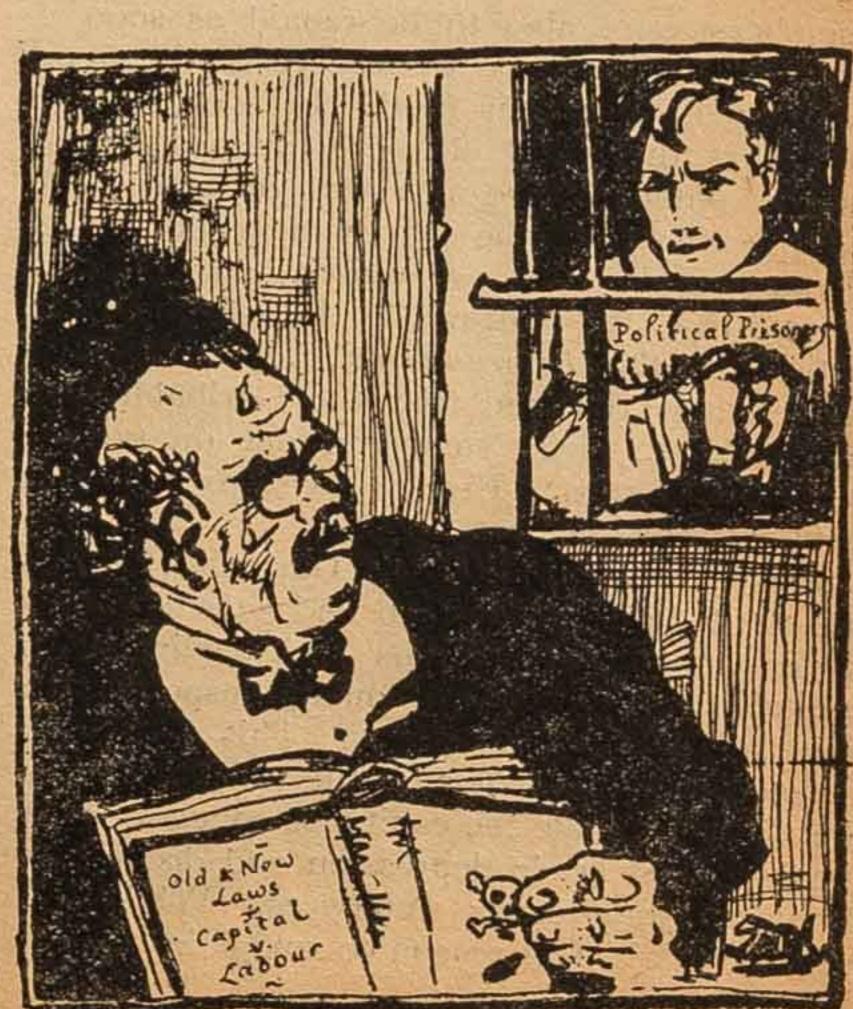

Flora easily accustomed herself to the parthad been left in abeyance by the Government of the great.

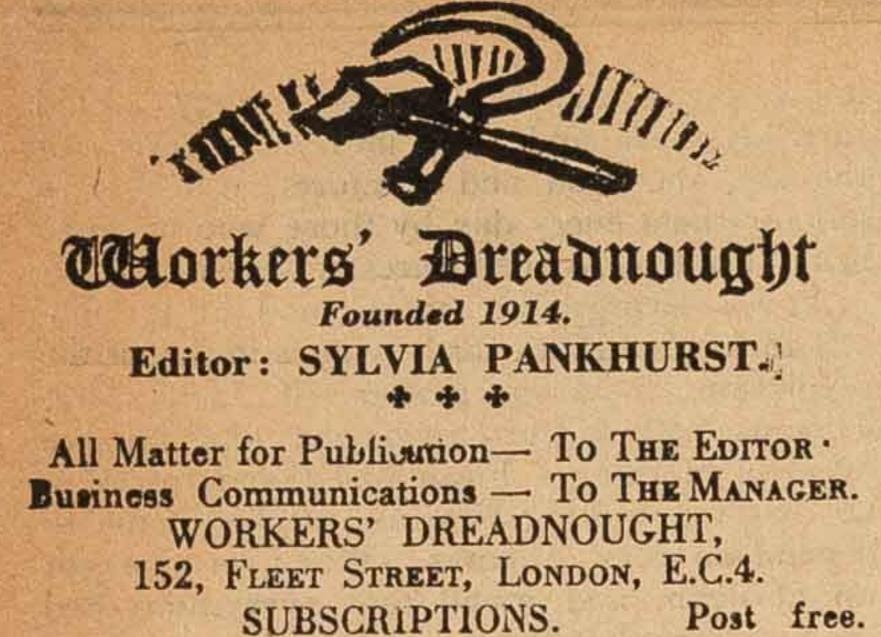

banker who was hiding with the bishop in the pig-sty. The banker's wife was a lady of title a good many years younger than the banker, and only a few years older than George. She assured George that she had left the palace finally in order that the last of the food might be reserved for her husband and the bishop. George thought this very noble of her. She asked George whether he thought it her duty to go to her husband in the pig-sty, urging that there was only one apartment inside and that it would scarcely be proper for her to sleep there since the bishop shared it with her spouse. George assured the unfortunate lady that it would be most unsuitable for her to live in the pig-sty. He thought it a most remarkable instance of wifely duty that she had even contemplated such a course. After a time George and the lady decided that they might regard the banker as dead and set up housekeeping together. The lady was not domesticated, but George had learnt to be; and the island arrangements were such that housework was really a negligible quantity. George was apt to be a little At last, a couple of months after the revolt, jealous when his lady met any of her old associates from the first-class cabins; but a spice of jealousy only made him think the more of her. He counted himself a lucky man to be permitted to brush her hair and

As for the Scotsman, he never came to re-

So it was that the shipwrecked people lived (THE END.)

Three months (13 weeks) ...... 18. 71/8d. Six months (26 weeks) ...... 3s. 3d. One year (52 weeks) ...... 6s. 6d. Subscriptions can start from any week.

Vol. X. No. 43. SATURDAY, JAN. 12TH, 1924.

Our Diew.

ITALIAN DICTATOR'S NEW ATTACK ON TRADE UNIONISM.

Mr. Mussolini's Fascist Government has overturned the administration of the Italian fostering of manufacturing industries by a Seamen's Federation and has sequestrated the bounty or a protective tariff." The South funds, which amount to 19,000,000 lire, and African Labour Party has entered into an are said to be the largest Trade Union fund alliance with the South African Nationalist the Seamen's Conference at Genoa was dis- such. turbed; but the disturbance, in which shots were fired, was created, says Giulietti, the Leader of the Seamen's Federation, by men who are not members of it. Obviously, these men were reactionaries, since they called for cheers for Mussolini and D'Annunzio, and made the latter their president.

The Government has appointed three Commissioners, Admiral Gagni, Captain Barenghi and Captain Manzutto, to direct the Seamen's Federation, Captain Barenghi being called the Lord High Commissioner for the Seamen's Federation.

The capitalist press is now stating that Giulietti is a Communist. On the contrary, he is one of the Moderate Labour Leaders of

At the same time, it must be remembered that the Italian Seamen's Federation has carried on a vigorous struggle against the Fascisti. It is for this that Giulietti and his colleagues have been expelled.

It should be remembered that in connection with the Italian Seamen's Federation is the Garibaldi Marine Co-operative Society, which was founded in 1919, the increases in pay then obtained by the seamen being invested in it. At the end of 1922 the Garibaldi had 65,000 members and a share capital of 54,000,000 lire. Of a net profit of 1,319,822.75 lire in 1922, 10. per cent. was paid to reserve, 45 per cent. to sinking fund, from which disabled members and relatives of deceased members were being repaid the value of their shares and other members were also to be repaid as soon as possible, 20 per cent. to welfare fund, 25 per cent. to development fund. It is on the pretext that the funds of the Federation might be dissipated by the men who organised this Co-operative that the Government has seized them. Oden Por, a writer, who is now attempting to whitewash Fascism, in an article in the International Labour Review last spring, reported that the Garibaldi then owned seven large steamers, one oil tanker, and smaller craft. Five of its ships had been bought from the State.

It was inevitable that the Garibaldi, engaging as it did in production and sale for profit under capitalist conditions and dealing with discharge some of its employees. Whilst the open in case of attack. workers might feel reason to complain of that, Our peace-loving cousins!

however, the upholders of capitalism have no call to do so. The American Seamen's Federation has been attacked because it was a bulwark of resistance to Fascism.

British workers should now respond by a boycott of Italian ships until the Government dictators of the Seamen's Union are removed. Now is the time to show solidarity.

What representations will be made to the Italian Government, if and when there is a Labour Government? We shall see. Italian workers should respond by forming ship committees independent of the Union. Now is the moment to act.

STATE SUBSIDIES FOR CAPITALISM. Many Labour politicians are to-day toying with the idea of State subsidies for capitalist industry. The plan has been tried extensively

It is wholly unsound from the standpoint of those who would emancipate the workers and build up the industrial republic of free

British Labour Leaders are dallying with proposals to subsidise the capitalists, and this is a tendency against which we must use our

The South African has declared for "the Party in the hope of defeating the Smuts The pretext which the Fascist Government Government. The South African Nationalists has manufactured to explain its action, is that make no pretence of opposition to capitalism as

WILL THERE BE A RAILWAY STRIKE?

The N.U.R., of Mr. Thomas and Mr. Cramp, has accepted the Railway National Wages Board award; the Locomotive Enginemen's Society, of Mr. Bromley, has rejected it. The engine-drivers hold the key position: i Mr. Bromley's Union wills it a strike is inevitable. Unless the Army is used to supply sufficient engine-drivers a strike must mean either that Mr. Bromley's Union will win, or that the workers will be literally starved into subjection after a long and bitter struggle in which all transport will be disorganised.

There is another alternative; but it is one not yet tried in this country. It is to use Government powers to coerce the locomotive men and their Union. That expedient has been used through conscription in France; it has been used by injunction in America; it was used in Italy the other day. It may not be tried in this country yet, though it was threatened when the E.T.U. was on the verge of a strike not long ago. A strong Labour Party in the House of Commons might be held to provide a complete safeguard against Government interference against the strikers; but Socialist Ministers have not refrained from such interference in

It must be remembered that there is a sharp rivalry between the Unions of Mr. Thomas and Mr. Bromley.

It must also be remembered that Mr. Thomas has declared that Mr. Asquith, when Prime Minister, would have been justified had he interfered to prevent a former railway strike from holding up the supplies of the Great efforts will be made to prevent the railway strike on the plea that it would injure a Labour Government. The fortunes of the Labour Party will in the long run suffer more if it sets itself in opposition to the demands of the wage-earners, than if it assists the wage-earners to flout their employers.

AMERICA'S ARMADA.

The U.S.A. Atlantic and Pacific Fleets are capitalist firms, was in many respects run to be mobilised for the largest manœuvres like a capitalist concern. This doubtless ever held. They are to rehearse their procaused discontent amongst the workers, when cedure should an enemy fleet appear in the the Garibaldi, like the capitalist concerns, met North Atlantic. The Army and Navy are to the period of trade depression and decided to co-operate in keeping the Panama Canal

AT HOME IN THE WORKHOUSE.

The Ashby-de-la-Zouch Guardians have taken into the local Workhouse sixty persons. evicted from their homes owing to shortage of houses. The Guardians have cruelly decreed that the husbands and wives shall be separated and the families broken up, as is the case with all the other unfortunate inmates.

Those who have taken shelter in the Workhouse should refuse to accept such conditions. To those of our readers who are interested in this matter-and who, indeed, is not-we recommend a penny pamphlet, Law and Authority, published at this office, which precedes his work. shows the single-handed fight put up by a poor father in Kensington to insure that his family should secure something like home conditions, even in the Workhouse.

The end of this hideous private property system is, indeed, overdue!

DOCKERS AND MINERS.

Notices to terminate the existing wage agreements by both dockers and miners may cause embarrassment to the next Government. whatever its Party may be. In the case of the dockers, the existence of the new rival Union, the National Amalgamated Stevedores', Lightermen and Dockers' Union, may add some of that spice of vigour to the struggle which will be supplied by the Engine-drivers' Union in the railway contest.

GERMAN SOCIAL DEMOCRATS.

A Daily Telegraph correspondent repeats some criticisms of German Social Democrats which are current in Germany:

"Sitting in the seat of Government, they acquiesced in the income-tax being deducted regularly from the workman's wages; while the employer, in consequence of the depreciation, paid practically none at all. Till it was too late they did not understand that depreciation in itself constituted perhaps the heaviest tax that has ever been levied on the classes least able to pay. Under this Socialist or semi-Socialist régime there was, in fact, created in Germany a situation analogous to that existing in France just before her great Revolution, when nearly the whole burden of the State was borne by the impoverished peasantry, and the wealthiest nobles paid nothing whatever into the public treasury.

"In like manner the Socialist leaders failed in their capacity as trade union officials. They allowed themselves to be hocussed by the capitalist parties and Press into the belief that the economic stress of depreciation was being felt by all classes of the population alike. When at last they discovered that precisely by means of depreciation the old agrarian and industrial fortunes had been enormously increased and vast new ones built up from the very foundation, they were ashamed to admit their earlier ignorance and its appalling conup to the Reichstag. Thus it happens that even to-day the bulk of the nation does not know that its evaporated wealth has condensed in the pockets of other Germans, and not in the coffers of the Reparation Commission. Unable to cope with such comparatively simple problems as these, the leaders could hardly be expected to track the wealthy industrialists through the labyrinths of cooked balance-sheets and discover that the share given to Labour from the actual profits of manufacture had never been so small as it has been during these years of Socialist predominance and participation in German Governments.

classes is to-day a pitiable one-and it undoubtedly is-they have to thank for in mainly, if not entirely, the ignorance and inability to think of their well-meaning and doubtless, for the most part, honest but incompetent and inexperienced leaders."

Wanted: "Red Rubber," by E. D. Morel. Above massed coins the lottery numbers leap Secondhand copy. " Economics Without Like northern lights ablaze." Headaches." "Two Glorious Triumphs, The burning streets like long canals of light 1916-1918.

RUSSIAN POEMS.

Modern Russian Poetry. An Anthology Chosen and Translated by Babette Deutsch and Avrahm Yarmolinsky. (John Lane.)

This delightful volume contains a varied selection of new poems by new authors, as well as some that are justly known and familiar. An interesting note on each writer

We have selected the following poems from the anthology.

BEHOLD A SOWER WENT FORTH TO SOW."

By ALEXANDER PUSHKIN. With freedom's seed the desert sowing, I walked before the morning star; From pure and guiltless fingers throwing-Where slavish plows had left a scar-The fecund seed, the procreator; Oh, vain and sad disseminator, I learnt then what lost labours are. . . Graze if you will, you peaceful nations, Who never rouse at honour's horn! Should flocks heed freedom's invocations? Their part is to be slain or shorn, Their dower the yoke their sires have worn

"WITH MY FANCY I GRASPED."

Through snug and sheepish generations.

By Konstantin Balmont. With my fancy I grasped at the vague shadows straying, At the vague shadows straying where the daylight had fled; I ascended a tower, and the stairway was And the stairway was swaying underneath Eh, Russians,

And the higher I climbed, ever clearer were Lift your trumpets.

my light tread.

Ever clearer were rounded dreaming hilltops aglow; d from Heaven to Earth twilight voices resounded.

I wilight voices resounded from above and the higher I rose, strange horizons Strange horizons defining, did the summits

d my eyes as I looked were caressed by their shining. Vere caressed by their shining, their farewell, sad and clear.

Now the night had appeared, earth in darkness lay dreaming,

Earth in darkness lay dreaming, like a The stars. slumbering star; Vhile the smouldering sun, his dim embers still gleaming, sequences for the people who had sent them His dim embers still gleaming, shone for

I had learned to ensnare the vague shadows far straying, The vague shadows far straying, where the daylight had fled; Ever higher I rose, and the stairway was

And the stairway was swaying underneath my light tread.

> EVENTIDE. By VALERY BRUSOV.

posters shout, their gorgeous motley "If the lot of the German working The signboards' groaning fills the street, and from the shops a shrill light sharply

> As cries of triumph mock defeat. Behind the glimmering panes soft fabrics

And diamonds pour their poison daze,

Flow on—the city is alive. It swarms to celebrate the dawn of night Like some unloosed and monstrous hive. The sky and all its sentient stars are hid

By scattered arc-lamps beaming blue. And harlots jostle sages where they thrid The dancers in a rippling queue. Between the gay quadrilles the form and

Among the waltzers, clanking slide The tramways, with blue lightnings in their

Like sheaves of fire, the motors glide. Shame, like a leader his bright baton wielding To the rank music of the wheels, Has fused the thousand-throated throng, the

As one, a holy chorus peals; "Dust, we enthrone thee; brief and radiant Dancing the round, we glorify, About electric altars where they thrust Their spears into the empty sky."

"THE CAPITALS ARE ROCKED WITH THUNDER."

By Nikolai Nekrasov. The capitals are rocked with thunder Of orators in wordy feuds. But in the depths of Russia, yonder, An old-age awful silence broods. Only in the wind in wayside willows, Coming and going, does not cease; And corn-stalks touch in curving billows The earth that cherishes and pillows, Through endless fields of changeless peace.

TRANSFIGURATION: III.

By SERGEI YESENIN. Foolers of the universe. You who trailed heaven with the net of dawn, Beneath the plow of storm The dumb earth roars. Golden-tusked, the colter breaks The cliffs.

A new sower Roams the fields. New seeds He casts into the furrows.

A guest of light drives toward us In a coach, Across the clouds A mare races.

The breech-band on the mare: The blue; The bells on the breech-band:

ASK for No 2. at your Newsagent.

A Complete play by Toller. Stories by Marsden, Gorky, Grant, and others.

32 Pages—Sixpence

FROM THE PUBLISHERS

The Day Dream, a Study in Development, by George H. Green, B.Sc. (Lond.), B.Litt. (Oxon.), (University of London Press, 6s.). Mr. Green's theory is that day dreams indicate the character and development of the individual, and that the various day dreams of a particular individual are variations of the same theme and possess the same characteristics; also that certain types of day dreams are common to individuals at certain periods of development. Mr. Green asserts that day dreams, like dreams, are the outcome of actual experiences and desires variously combined.

These contentions are doubtless true in a broad sense, though the application of the theory may easily be strained. Mr. Green's handling of his subject is interesting, and he gives a number of really fascinating instances of day dreams, which make his book more readable than the average novel. Nevertheless, in order to present his thesis scientifically, it would have been necessary for Mr. Green to give a record and analysis of the day dreams of a number of individuals over a period of years, as well as the day dreams of various children at different ages.

Several of the day dreams given by Mr. Green seem to call for marked criticism of those responsible for the care of the child, and in one such case at least, the interpretation given by Mr. Green is far from satisfying.

In this case a child of three is said to have taken a pride in being "naughty." His school teacher tells him that all naughty boys will burn for ever in a fire, called Hell. He hears the same story in Sunday School. He wishes, according to Mr. Green, to continue being naughty, but to escape the fire which he believes is awaiting him. On several consecutive Sundays this three year old baby wakes up screaming: " Mother, take me out of the fire!" He says that he had been "naughty," and someone was putting him in the fire. The boy refuses to wear a red jersey in which he went to school on the plea that it is "red like fire." He presently refuses to say prayers. When his brother kneels the boy of three says to him: "Are you going to talk to God? Don't talk to him; he's a nasty wicked man. He sends boys to a wicked fire. If you're going to talk to him, I'm not going to listen. If you talk to him you will die, He makes people die. Don't talk to him."

The boy covers his head with the bed clothes. Mr. Green draws from this the conclusion that the boy will not pray, because the prayers contain a request to be a good boy, because he wishes to be a bad boy, that he wishes to escape from God because God will punish him for being a bad boy, and that if he cannot otherwise avoid Hell his mother will rescue him.

To us it would seem that foolish people have been cruelly threatening a child with an outrageous and disproportionate punishment for asserting his personality in childish mischief. That, young as he is, the child's sense of proportion shows him that to punish his actions in such a manner would be wickedly cruel and unjust. His experience has taught him that his mother would try to prevent such an evil from falling upon him. The child shows more intelligence than his elders.

As for the jersey incident, the child has probably been teased by his companions on account of it.

Political Crime, by Wilfred George Carlton Hall, B.C.L., M.A. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd., Ruskin House, 40, Museum Street, W.C.1. This is quite a useful manual on a subject always important to pioneers of social

It will be news to many people that under the Official Secrets Act of 1920, any persons carrying on the business of receiving for reward letters, telegrams, etc., for delivery or forwarding, are required to be registered by the police, otherwise they are liable to a month's imprisonment and a fine of £10.

The author is an apostle of severity. He desires that an alleged political motive for a the exercise of clemency, but rather the tion neither of serpent, subtlety, beast, nor reverse. He regards the question of prevent- field. ing political crime as one of urgency, and would by no means shrink from imposing the death penalty in cases of political offenders. He desires to see flogging made the punishment for treason and felony.

The book is a sign of the times. Some people are afraid of revolution.

WHY RUSSIA SHOULD BE RECOGNISED, by W. P. Coates. "Hands Off Russia" Com- before Moses, it has not yet acquired the EXPORT CREDIT SCHEMES AND ANGLO-RUSSIAN TRADE, by W. P. Coates. "Hands Off Russia " Committee.

These pamphlets argue that "Russia has now created the conditions essential to sound trade,' and important banks and firms have 'come forward and offered to share in the risks of the export credits system with the British Government.' "

M. de Monzie, a member of the French Senate, is quoted: "In the last twelve months Russia had made a great step towards getting out of chaos. That effort had not converted me to Bolshevism, but it made me sincerely Russophile. I am convinced that the attitude of abstention is inimical to the interests of France and Russia alike."

The provisions of the Rapallo Treaty are

THE BIBLE, v. THE SEPHER.

CAIN, a Dramatic Mystery in Three Acts, by Lord Byron, translated into French verse, and refuted in a series of Philosophical and Critical Remarks, preceded by a letter addressed to Lord Byron, upon the motives and purposes of this work, by Fabre d'Olivet. Done into English by Nayan Louise Redfield. G. P. Putnam & Sons.

This work, written in 1823, is mainly of interest, not for its criticism of Lord Byron's poem, but for its discussion of the text of the Bible, and its explanation that the Greek text of the Bible is by no means a faithful rendering of the Hebrew Sepher of Moses from which it was compiled.

D'Olivet argues that the Hebraic tongue, in which Moses wrote, altered during the successive revolutions to which the Hebrew people were prey during nearly a thousand years, was lost during the Babylonian captivity. It no longer existed when, four hundred years later, Ptolemy, King of Egypt, built the library at Alexandria and desired to enrich it with all the most precious literature of the world. He had received from Eleazar an example of the Sepher, and desired its translation into Greek; but it was difficult to find Jews able to undertake the work. The Essenes alone were able to do this for him, but they believed it would be criminal to reveal the text to strangers. Coerced by the authority of Ptolemy's order, the Essenes found a method of satisfying, both the King and their conscience. The text of the Sepher possessed three meanings: the first, proper; the second figurative; the third, hieroglyphic. These they compared to body, soul, and spirit. By the body of the book, they understood the gross and material sense; by the spirit and soul, the spiritual and mysterious sense, lost to the vulgar. "In giving the body of the Sepher, they obeyed the civil authority, and in retaining the spirit, their conscience. Thus they made a translation that was neither wholly exact, nor completely inexact." All this Fabre d'Olivet had explained in an earlier work, La Langue Hébraïque Restituée, which has been translated and published by Putnam. Byron based his poem on the text from the Greek Bible: "Now, the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field, which the Lord God had made." Gen. iii. I. Fabre d'Olivet shows that the text of the Sepher, from which the Essenes made the Bible, should be translated as follows:

"Now, Nahash (cupidity) was an insidious passion (blind principle) in all elementary life which Yahweh Ælohim had made."

crime should not be regarded as a reason for Our readers will observe that there is men-

Fabre d'Olivet explains the matter thus:

"Let us now consider what these same personages are, not in the translators of Moses, but in Moses himself.

"Adam, in his universal essence, cannot be explained without a previous instruction; for European civilisation not being nearly so advanced as that of Asia and Africa was same universal thoughts, and lacks in consequence the terms to express them. These terms can only be formed as the thoughts are developed. . . . Adam, in his particular essence, can be explained; although this idea particularised in the thought of Moses, is still presented to us under an universal form. Adam is that which I have called the kingdom of man; it is man, conceived abstractly; that is to say, the general mass of all the men who compose, have composed, or will compose humanity, who enjoy, have enjoyed, or will enjoy human life. This mass, conceived thus as one sole being, lives a proper, universal life, which is particularised and reflected in individuals of the two sexes. Considered under this latter relation, Adam is male and female.

"Whether Adam is conceived in his universal, or in his particular essence, Eve is always his creative faculty, his efficient force, his own will, by means of which he manifests himself exteriorly. In the principle of his universal existence, Eve is not distinguished from the universal creative according to his own will, his efficient, man. creative force. It is always through Eve Such a revelation has more important and without him.

"Cain and Abel are the two primordial forces of elementary nature. These are the first two cosmogonic beings produced by Eve, when after a certain movement toward elementary nature, she has lost her name of Aïsha, which designated the intellectual nature of Adam, to take that of Eve, which expresses no more than the material life of this universal being. It is in this material life that Cain and Abel took birth, and that their principles, which were in power of being from the origin of things, passed into action to produce all that which must in the future constitute that life. Cain can be conceived as the action of compressive force, and Abel as that of expansive force. These two actions, issues of the same source, are hostile from the moment of their birth, according to the manner by which everything exists in nature. They act incessantly the one upon the other, and seek reciprocally to dominate, and to be reduced to their own nature. The compressive action, more energetic than the expansive action, always gains the ascendancy in the beginning; and overwhelming it, so to speak, compacts the universal substance upon which it acts, and gives existence to material forms that were not previously. "In personifying these two actions under the names of Cain and Abel, and in considering these two elementary beings as charges. brothers, one has been able easily to see this life gives place to another.

depends no more upon the fratricide of Cain $200.00.

than it does upon the fact that when fire has reduced bodies into vapours, these bodies condensed by a certain elementary action, fall again as water and extinguish the fire that gave birth to them. . . .

"As to Lucifer . . . Moses . . . gives him no other name than that of Nahash, which characterises properly that deep, inner sentiment which attaches the being to his proper individual existence, and which makes him ardently desire to conserve it or to extend it. This name, which I have rendered cupidity (original attraction), has been unfortunately translated in the version of the Hellenists as serpent; but never did it have this meaning, even in the most vulgar language. . . . Nahash is rather, if I can express it thus, that radical egoism which urges the being to make a centre of himself, and to draw everything to himself. Moses says that this sentiment is the blind passion of elementary animality, the secret spring or the leaven that God has given to nature. . . . This name characterises, in nearly all the idioms of the Orient, that which is central, hidden, mysterious, sealed, obscure. Thus, according to the spirit of the sepher . . . Nahash harym could not be a distinct, independent being, such as you [Lord Byron] have depicted Lucifer following the system that Moses borrowed from the Chaldeans and Persians; but, indeed, a central motive given to matter, a hidden spring, a leaven, acting in the profundity of things, which God has placed in corporeal nature to elaborate its elements." It thus appears that the Bible tale of faculty from which Adam emanates. It is Genesis is but a mis-translation, and that the not until the moment of his distinction that Hebrews who conceived the Sepher, of which Adam becomes a free and independent it is a distortion, were merely musing upon being, and that he can exercise exteriorly, the various characteristics in the nature of that Adam is modified in good or in evil. bearing upon the teaching of the Churches Eve makes for him everything within him than upon the poem of Lord Byron, who replied laconically to Fabre d'Olivet that he was "a poet and not a metaphysician."

> UNDER THE STARS AND STRIPES. By DEFENCE NEWS SERVICE, U.S.A.

A fourth political prisoner has entered on a ten-year sentence with the arrival of Edwin Krier at the State penitentiary at Boise. Krier was convicted at St. Maries under the criminal syndicalism law on evidence that he was a member in good standing of Lumber Workers' Industrial Union. The case will be appealed by Attorney Harold Pease, acting for the General Defense Committee.

Extraordinary rulings were made by Presiding Judge Steele, of Moscow, who instructed the jury that." slowing down" is criminal sabotage and teaching it is a felony, and that strikes off the job for political prisoners are criminal.

Sunday, December 23rd, began the campaign for the release of the 120 Labour prisoners in State penitentiaries. This date, originally set aside as Amnesty Day for the Federal prisoners, became Amnesty Day for the State prisoners, following the pardons by President Coolidge.

At Sacramento, California, Homer Stewart and Peter Mukusich were convicted on December 21st, adding two more to the 95 men serving terms on criminal syndicalism

The case rested on the testimony of the a murder in what was a cosmogonic act of notorious stool pigeons, Coutts and Townmomentary destruction, and poetically to call send, with additional support from Diamond. fratricide that destruction of the action of These detectives, former I.W.W. members, one by the other, so that thanks to the ran the gamut of confessions in arsons and translation of the Hellenists, there has been sabotage by themselves. The prosecution's transformed into an historical, positive fact, argument was that if Coutts and Diamond, as into a murder, into an execrable crime, into I.W.W. members, had committed these acts, a fratricide at last, a cosmogonic act which therefore the I.W.W. as an organisation was began at the origin of elementary life, which then and to-day an association organised for still endures, and which will endure until purposes of crime and violence. Coutts, under cross-examination, admitted that he was paid ". . . The fatality of our destiny $200.00 for his testimony, and Townseno Calexico, California.—Forty and fifty day sentences were imposed on James Hartford and H. Comey arrested with I.W.W. cards on their persons. Hartford is a member of the I.W.W. marine workers' organisation, and Comey a construction worker. California's total of labour prisoners is far ahead of all other States.

Ford and Suhr, Mooney and Billings, serving life terms after conviction on perjured evidence, add to the California roll of shame. consider its details. There have been 79 trials, The I.L.P. seems to be moving backwards. involving 289 persons, all but three of whom were members of the I.W.W.

The apparent exclusion of James Price and Nicholas Senn Zogg from the presidential amnesty, is leading to an investigation by the General Defense Committee. Price was one of the Sacramento defendants, who, while out on bail, was jailed again in California under the syndicalist law, and is now in state prison. Zogg, an anarchist, is serving a ten-year term at Atlanta as a war objector. The administration is said to have charged that he aided a draft evader to escape into Mexico. But all imprisoned draft evaders have long been freed. Let's Go, a journal of fundamental economics. Ten cents., 5d. per copy, or one dollar, 4s. 2d., a year. Gerald Geraldson, 24, Clarkson Street, New York.

We cannot recommend this book, it is both aspirations through the medium of the arts. reactionary and poorly informed, and contains To the Secretary, "Germinal Circle." many obvious mistakes and mis-statements.

JOTTINGS.

Soviet Russia buying aeroplanes on a large

Plague rising in India.

Mr. H. G. Wells says many teachers do not realise the world is a going concern, but " regard it as a finished affair."

The Scottish I.L.P. Conference rejected a The magnitude of this five-year war on motion to call the Council of Action and organised labour since the syndicalism law declare a general strike if British troops are became operative can only be shown when we used for violence against the German people.

COMMUNIST WORKERS' MOVEMENT. INDOOR MEETINGS.

Sunday, January 20th, 7.30 p.m., Hamilton Hall, 375, High Road, Willesden Green. Sylvia Pankhurst and others.

Sunday, February 3rd, 7 p.m., New Morris Hall, 79, Bedford Road, Clapham. Sylvia Pankhurst, N. Smyth.

Sunday, February 17th, 7.30 p.m., Hamilton Hall, Willesden Green.

THE "GERMINAL CIRCLE."

LABOUR AND FREEDOM, by Horace W. The "Germinal Circle" exists to assist in Chatterton. Heath Crauton, Ltd. 3s. 6d. promoting the expression of modern ideas and INDER THE STARS AND STRIPES.

By Defence News Service.

S. President Coolidge ordered the release f the 30 remaining Federal war opinion poliical prisoners before Christmas Day. These

WORKERS' OPPOSITION IN RUSSIA,

> By Alexandra Kollontay. 6d.

DREADNOUGHT £1,000 FUND. Brought forward, £169 12s. 64d.; H. Smith, 5s.; W. Malvin, 5s.; E. C., 8d.; W. Braddock, 1s. 9d.; — Harrby, 2s.; A. & A. H. 15s. (monthly); S. Palmer, 1s. (monthly); F. Lawes, 10s.; total for week, £1 19s. 9d.; total, f, 171 12s.  $3\frac{1}{2}d$ .

PROLETCULT.

A monthly magazine for boys and girls, edited by TOM ANDERSON and published by the Proletarian Bookstall. 39, Shuttle Street,

ONE PENNY.

Our Bookshop.

Peter Kropotkin.-Conquest of Bread, 2s.; Fields, Factories and Workshops, 2s.; Mutual Aid, 29.; War, 2d.; Modern Science and Anarchism, 18.; Appeal to the Young, 2d.; Expropriation, 2d.; The Wage System, 2d.

De Leon.—As to Politics, 9d.; Two Pages from Roman History, 4d.; Socialism v. Anarchism, 3d.; Who Pays the Taxes? 2d.; Burning Question of Trade Unionism, 2d.; Marx on Mallock, 2d.; Preamble of the Industrial Workers of the World, 2d.; What Means This Strike? ad.; Berger's Hit and Misses, 9d.; Fifteen Questions, 18. 6d.

Wilhelm Liebknecht.-No Compromise, 8d.; Memoirs of Marx, 3s. 6d.

E. Lipson.—Economic History, Middle Ages,

Lissagarry.—History of the Commune, 1871

(translated by Eleanor Marx Aveling), 4s. 6d. Jack London .- Michael, Brother of Jerry, 28. : Mutiny of the Elsinore, 2s.; Revolution, 2s.; The Human Drift, 2s.; John Barleycorn, 2s.; The Jacket, 2s.; The Red One, 2s.; War of the Classes, 28.; The Night Born, 19.6d.; When God Laughs, 18.6d.; The Road, 18.6d.; The Scarlet Plague, 18.6d.; The Strength of the Strong, 1s. 6d.; Before Adam, 1s. 6d.; The House of Pride, 18. 6d.; Love and Life, 18. 6d.; Children of the Frost, 18.6d.; The Valley of the Moon, 28. and 6d.; He Renounced the Faith, Karl Marx.—Capital (Vols. I., II., III.), each 128. 6d.; The Paris Commune, 28. 6d.; Value, Price and Profit, 6d.; Wage Labour and Capital, 3d.; The Gotha Programme, 3d.; Critique of Political Economy, 6s. 6d.; Poverty of Philosophy, 6s. 6d.; Revolution and Counter-Revolution, 28. 6d.; Civil War in France, 3s.; Civil War in France (Kerr's edition), 1s. 6d.

Marx and Engels .- Communist Manifesto, 3d. Olive Schreiner .- Woman and Labour, 4s. 6d.; Woman and War, 6d.; Dream Life and Real Life, 1s.; Dreams, 2s.; The Sunlight Lay Across My Bed, 6d.; Trooper Peter Halkett, 18.; Story of an African Farm, 3s. 6d.

GERMS OF MIND IN PLANTS. By R. H. France. The author shows us the dramatic experience of plants; how they feed the insects honey to reward them for carrying the fructifying pollen; how they know the law of gravity; how they bait and trap their prey. Still more, Mr. France shows us how the sense organs communicate news to the whole plant, and proves that plants possess a high degree of constitueness, and even the germs of mind.

Read EIRE The Irish Nation Weekly Review of Irish Republican Opinion

PRICE TWOPENCE

On Sale Saturdays

THE "ONE BIG UNION BULLETIN"

The One Big Union seeks to organise the workers on class lines. Read about it. 10/- per year; 5/- six months. Plebs Buildings, 54 Adelaide Street, Winnipeg.

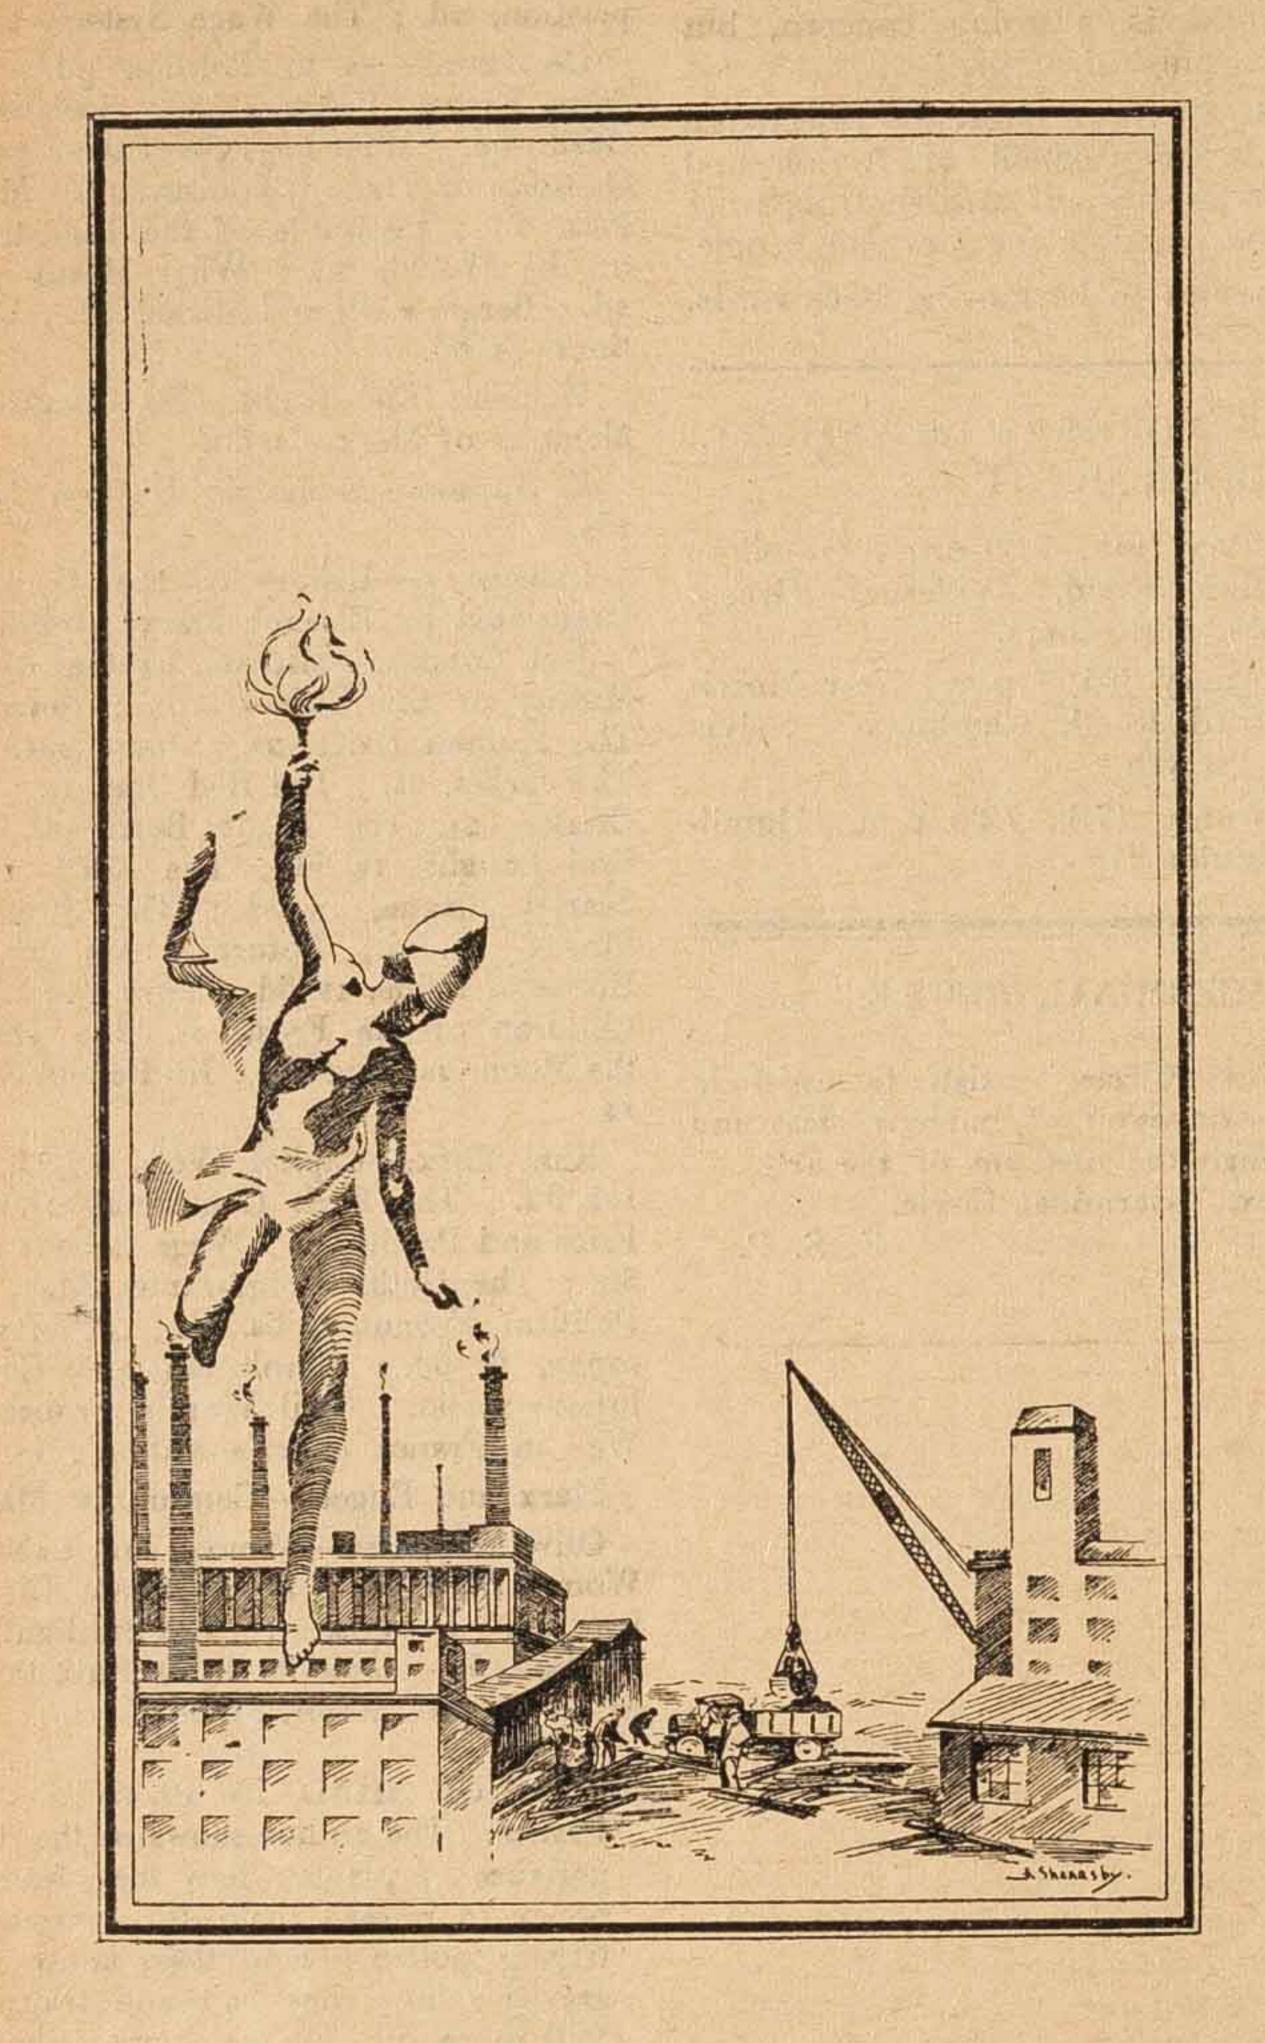

YOUR BUBBCRIPTION

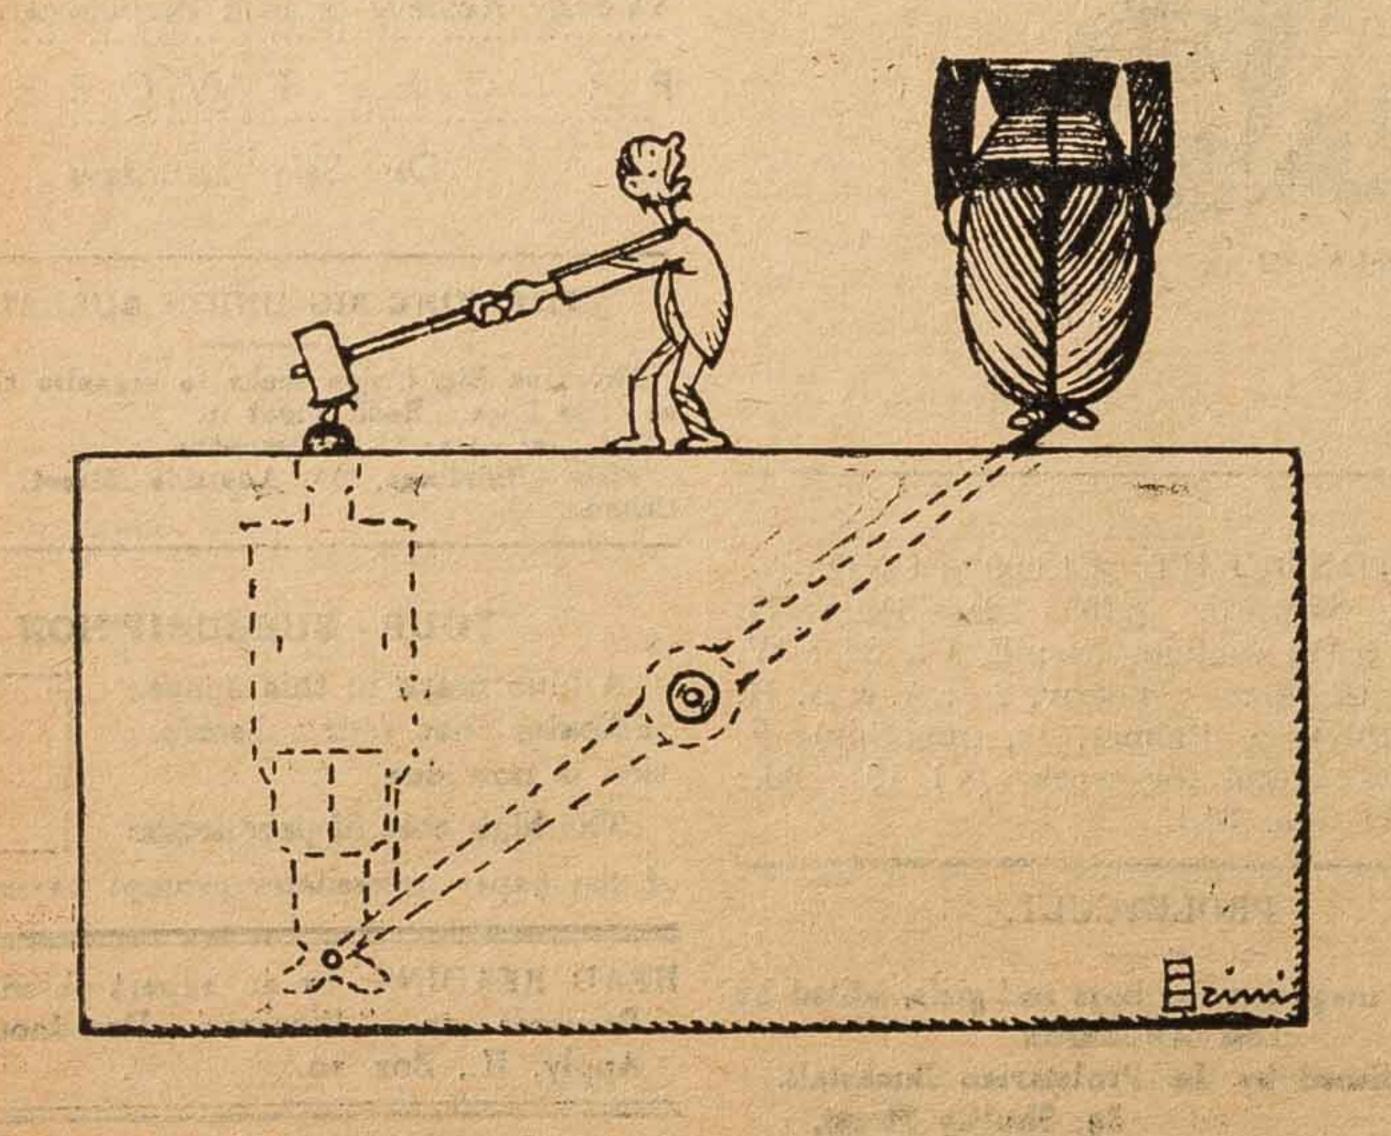

A blue mark in this space indicates that your subscription is now due. The high cost of production of the paper necessitates prompt payment.

HEAD READING, by an expert phrenologiet .-Proceeds to "Workers' Dreadnought." -Apply, H., Box so.

WANTED, a copy of "Theater Craft" (No. 87.

Signs of Change: Seven Lectures ..... 6/-The Life and Death of Jason ..... 2/6 Early Romances ...... 2/6 WILLIAM MORRIS: Monopoly ...... 2d. Useful Work and Useless Toil ...... 2d. A. PANNEKOEK: Marxism and Darwinism ...... 8d. The Dream ...... 6/-The Joy of Life ..... 5/-Germinal: Master and Man ...... 5/-Dram-shop ...... 5/-His Masterpiece ...... 5/-Soviet Russia as I Saw It ...... 1/-Women and Economics ...... 7/6 SYLVIA PANKHURST: M. O'CALLAGHAN: Rebel Ireland ..... The Schooling of the Future ...... 1d. Concerning Children ...... 6/6 The Revolution To-morrow ...... 2d. The Fortune of the Rougons ...... 5/-Plays Pleasant ...... 7/6 Paris ...... 5/-Work ...... 5/-Fruitfulness ..... 5/-Truth ...... 5/-ANATOLE FRANCE: The Red Lily ...... 2/-Thais ......2/-Penguin Island ...... 2/-The Crime of Sylvestre Bonnard ...... 2/-The Human Tragedy, with 16 illustrations by Michel Sevier ...... 10/6 Ditto ...... 1/-Majesty of Justice ...... 1/-SIR J. G. FRAZER: The Golden Bough: A Study in Magic and Religion (12 vols.) ...... (each) 12/6 Folk Lore in the Old Testament ...... 18/-JOHN GALSWORTHY: In Chancery ...... 9/6 Saint's Progress ...... 7/6 Beyond ...... 6/-The Country House ..... 6/- and 2/-The First and the Last ..... 6/- and 2/-Fraternity ...... 6/- and 2/-The Patrician ...... 6/- and 2/-The Inn of Tranquillity ...... 6/-The Island of Pharisees ...... 6/-The Man of Property ...... 6/- and 2/-Awakening ...... 7/6 Abbe Mouret's Transgression ... ..... 5/-The Fat and the Thin ...... 5/-The Conquest of Plassans ...... 5/-Lloyd George Takes the Mask Off ...... 12d. Cashel Byron's Profession ..... 2/-

OUR BOOKSHOP.

WANTED.—Second-hand copies: "How the War Came," by Lord Loreburn; "Economics for the General Reader" (Clay); "Brass Check" (Upton Sinclair), cheap edition; "Ancient Lowly" (Osborn Ward).

SUBSCRIBERS.

A certain number of subscribers have fallen into arrears with their payments, and as we need funds very urgently we urge them to pay up at once. Their papers are marked each week with the date when their subscription expired. Rates: 18. 7½d. three months, 3s. 3d. six months, 6s. 6d. twelve months.

Some of our 1s. a week subscribers, too, need a reminder that their subscriptions are due.

COMMUNIST WORKERS' MOVEMENT, meetings to explain the policy of this movement, can be arranged on application to the Secretary, 152, Fleet Street, E.C.4.

SYLVIA PANKHURST is booking provincial lecturing engagements.—Apply for dates to "Dreadnought" office, 152, Fleet Street.

FOR SALE. — Engineer's Taper Guage, £1; Radius Guage, 7s. 6d. (Starrett's). Proceeds for "Dreadnought" Fund.

Published by E. Sylvia Pankhurst, at 152, Fleet Street, London, E.C. 4, and printed by the Agenda Press, Ltd. (T.U.), at 10, Wine Office Court, London, E.C. 4.