FOR GOING TO THE ROOT.

Vol. X. No. 48.

February 16th, 1924.

LINES FROM "MASSES AND MEN." By Ernst Toller. Group of young working men:

We waste ourselves with words of hate and fury.

The masters build their palaces, while our brothers

Rot in the trenches. Meadows and dancing colours, play, Blossom about us—in our nights We read of it and howl to heaven A craving lives in us for knowledge . . . But when they took the best of life It turned to evil. . . . Sometimes we touch it in the theatres, So tender and so fine, it mocks Us with its beauty. They have destroyed our youth in schools, Our souls are broken and our lives Shout want-raw want.

We are the steaming stench of want. What else are we to-day? We will not wait!

Group of farm labourers: We have been hounded off our mother earth.

Rich masters buy the land As they buy venal women; Make sport of her-Our blessed mother earth; Thrust our rough arms Into munition factories, Where we, uprooted, wither. lovless towns break our strength. We want the land! The land for all!

The Masses in the Hall:

The land for all!

The Woman:

When I passed through the poor quarters, Where grey drips Through shingled roofs And fungus grows on bedroom walls, A sick man stuttered: The street is better-almost better-We live in sties, don't we? in sties! His eyes were shy, And I was shamed with him. . . . But would you know the way, brothers, The only remedy for us Weak ones, Who hate the cannons? Strike! Not a hand's turn more! To strike is action.

WAR.

War, l abhor, And yet how sweet The sound along the marching street, Of drum and fife, and I forget, Broken old mothers, and the whole Dark butchering without a soul.

Without a soul save this bright drunk Of heady music, sweet as hell; And even my peace-abiding feet, Go marching with the marching feet, For yonder goes the fife, And what care I for human life? The tears fill my astonished eyes, And my full heart is like to break; And yet 'tis all embannered lies A dream those drummers make.

O it is wickedness to clothe, You hideous grinning thing that stalks, Hidden in music, like a queen That in a garden of glory walks, Till good men love the thing they loathe.

ON FOREIGN POLICY. By Sylvia Pankhurst.

Several readers ask whether there is any alternative to what is called a "British' foreign policy, and to the building up of a balance of power to counter that of France or any government which may seem to threaten the British Empire?

Our answer is: Yes; there is an alternative foreign policy which is the only policy for Socialists, Communists, Anarchists—all, whatever they call themselves, who oppose the capitalist system.

To gain a proper perspective view of the international situation it is essential to realise that the governments of all the powers are contending to secure the advantage. From this cause arose the Great War.

At the close of the Great War the Allied victors contended amongst themselves for the spoils of victory. Undoubtedly the British Government secured at the time the lion's share, in the German colonies, Palestine and Mesopotamia, with its oil. Undoubtedly, too, the British Government got the better of the French in the arrangements made shortly after in relation to oil and other concessions, both in French territory and other parts of the Undoubtedly since that time the French Government has become more and more openly aggressive in its efforts for supremacy. The British Government has stolen a march in regard to oil. The French Government has retaliated by taking possession of the Ruhr. coal. It recks as little how the workers who dig Ruhr coal are affected, as the British cared for the natives of the German colonies.

The guileless pacifist, who is unconsciously affected by the prevailing propaganda of British policy, protests that one cannot compare the natives of African colonies with the workers of the Ruth. That, however, is not the reason why British policy at once objected to the invasion of the Ruhr. The objection was based on the fear that France, by securing control of the Ruhr mines and iron and steel works, would become both militarily and industrially a greater force than Britain. British policy, perhaps, regretted the starvation of German people, but British policy did not shrink from imposing starvation during the blockade of Germany or Russia, and British policy was not deterred by such considerations of humanity when it invaded Soviet Russia, or when it provided the Czar with funds for a bloody coercion of his people after the 1905 Revolution, and the establishment of the first Duma.

There had been nothing to choose, morally speaking, between the policies of governments of the great powers, over a long period of years -each has been striving for supremacy-in wealth, in fighting strength, and in the possession of the machinery and raw material from which munitions of war may be produced. The powers have contracted alliances with other nations, not from friendship or the love of peace, but in order to add the strength and resources of their allies to their own strength and resources, in case of war with the great power which they have regarded as their immediate rival. In order to crush Power A, Power B has united with Powers C, D, and E, whilst Powers F, G, and H have been called into alliance by Power A. Power A being crippled, Powers B and C have begun to fear each other. Power B then forms an alliance with Power A, which it lately fought, and all the other powers re-group themselves about the principle antagonists. Again and again repeated, that is the history of modern Europe.

Our correspondents, who still believe in the necessity for a national policy, will go thus far with us. They will agree that the whole mad rivalry for power is an ignoble thing; but they protest that one must take the world as one finds it: "What is one to do?" Living within the jurisdiction of Power B, they worked for peace by negotiation with Power A, protesting with earnestness that they were, nevertheless, as patriotic as any, and were anxious their own country should thereby lose no advantages. They devoutly prayed that should there be a fight to a finish, the victory must, by all means, fall to their own Power B. Now that Power A is vanquished, and Power C emerges as a rival, whilst anxious to maintain the peace, they are determined that Power C shall secure no advantages which might threaten the superiority of Power B. They are eager to heal Power A from its war disasters, both from motives of humanity-and also that it may prove a useful bulwark against the aggressive tendencies of Power C. Their desire to check the growth of Power C they declare to be entirely altruistic. Power B has secured by aggression an Empire on which the sun never sets, and the rulership of the seas. Our pacifist correspondents desire their own Power B to retain these advantages, both in order to assure its national prosperity, and in order that it may have the power of the big stick to prevent the other governments behaving naughtily to each other.

Our pacifist correspondents are aware that the big stick is not an ethical weapon, but they urge that if Power B does not wield it mightily, Power C will snatch it. They reflect that though equality may be best of all, if one Power is to be strongest it were best that it should be the Power within whose borders they happen to reside.

This is why the Socialist Parties of the world supported the late war.

"No," protest our pacifist correspondents; "this case is different! The pretext for British participation in the last war was the invasion of Belgium and the desire of Germany to rule the world. We know that Belgium was never neutral, and that the German Government was no worse than the French; whilst the British was not guiltless. We believe that the late war could have been avoided, or at least ended, by negotiation. Consider," they urge, "the invasion of the Ruhr, and the suffering of the German people; consider the way in which France is subsidising the armies of Poland and other States and the military alliances she is making. We cannot be expected to stand by and see the French Government make itself the military dictator of the world." Moreover, they ask: "What would you have us do? What is your policy?"

Our policy is to stand altogether aloof from capitalist patriotism. So far from approving the maintenance of armies and navies to protect the Empire, we say: Let the Empire be

是是性性

Art, thou hast many infamies, But not an infamy like this; O snap the fife, and still the drum, And show the monster as she is. RICHARD LE GALLIENNE. observe that the country which is beaten is policy in the long run. women, but it would be well advised not to perhaps that which will make the greatest The same must be said of a French policy, a admit women as members.

Government will dominate Europe, we answer The alternative for us in Britain, as for other (Applause.) That the Grand Council acted that we must leave it to the people of France peoples in other countries, is to stand aloof wisely in excluding women from the Associaand to the people of invaded Germany to deal from the alliances and the rivalries, endeavour- tion."

with French aggression. It is objected that the French working ments, to fraternise with the peoples. masses support M. Poincaré in his Ruhr And should war come? invasion. Certainly the patriotic French If war should come our business would be burg Magistrate's Courts declaring that the Socialists are saying that, regrettable as the to declare the general strike against it, to regulation which had been in force was ultra invasion may be, the prestige of France is now declare the workers' revolution, and to frater- vires, was not going to make the slightest involved, and there can be no evacuation till nise with the invading armies should they difference in the policy of the party. The S.A. success has been achieved. Capitalist patriot- appear. ism has widespreading roots in all countries.

It is worth considering, however, whether defeat of our country's arms, should we suffer the Provinces or spheres of white men i the hold which aggressive French militarism the hard fate of a beaten nation? Britain. Obviously it will not.

It is argued that British troops must be kept in Germany to counteract the aggressive action, of the French, or to maintain the interests of British trade. Those who are working for the destruction of capitalism will not recognise trade interests as a part of their objective. They will understand that British troops in Germany will oppose any uprising of the people against the dominant capitalism, whether it be capitalism more easily without them. German or foreign. British troops have, in fact, been used to coerce the German workers in numerous industrial disputes, notably in forcing workers to submit to the abandonment of the eight-hour day. We should demand and endeavour to secure the recall of British troops yoke of a single militarism. Do not multiply from the Ruhr.

Our pacifist patriots are concerning themselves because the French Government does not repay its debt to the British; some of them still think that the German Government should pay what may be declared by the more moderate experts to be reasonable reparations.

desire to end the capitalist system. We should not lift a finger to secure the payment either of French debts or German reparations. Some of our pacifist patriots suggest that the bone of contention in the Ruhr should be shared between the rival claimants to avoid a quarrel. They suggest an international company in which there shall be German, British, French and Belgian shares. Others suggest an interallied Committee of British, French, Belgians, and perhaps Americans, to control the finances of Germany. Both these suggestions are immoral even from the standard of the honest bourgeois who believes in private ownership of production, distribution and transport. That such suggestions are made and seriously entertained by people who want to be humane and honest, shows the demoralising effect which the great war has had. Such foreign control for the purpose of exploiting the production of the country, places the yoke of alien militarism We are turning the corner. In 1919 the the peasants would certainly not do that. upon the workers of the country concerned. number of summonses issued at Caledon A very interesting question in this regard It raises a barrier against all progress. The Square, Cape Town, was 5,281; in 1920, was the fate of the Bolshevist campaign i fact that the proposed military yoke would be 5,584; in 1921, 7,989; and in 1922, 8,610. Poland in 1920. Why did the Russian Army inter-allied, instead of merely French, would According to the local press, the present year is then suddenly retire? When the writer, or but make it the more difficult for the German showing signs of being even larger-8,543 behalf of the Communist Workers' Party, workers to overthrow.

When the measure ratifying inter-allied control of Austrian finance was passing through the House of Commons, the Labour Party voted unanimously for it. Yet now it is recognised that the Allied financiers reaped the greatest benefit from the consequent loan as year's soon as control came into force, every proletarian organisation in Austria, even the more moderate, began to protest against the hardships it was inflicting upon the workers. The control has merely stabilised capitalism in Austria for a time.

broken up into its component parts. Let the Platitudes about the high intentions of plained that application had been made by subject nations work out their own salvation British foreign policy are easily uttered, but lady for membership, to which the Grand as they please; it is from the inner life of their a British policy is a policy primarily directed to Council could not see its way to accede. The people, not from the domination of an alien securing the most that can be obtained without rule book, said the Secretary, showed that the militarism, that their salvation will arise. As war for British traders and concessionaries, and rules were framed to deal with males only for preparing that the country we happen to to building up a balance of naval, military and Wherever women were employed, continued be wholly Communist. live in may be victorious in the next war, we air forces which will give the greater strength the Secretary, it had the tendency of a comrealise, as internationalists, that it does not to the British Empire and its Allies. That is petitive nature against the labour of men. matter which country is victorious, and we a capitalist policy. Inevitably it is a war The Association's aims were to help to assist advance in social evolution.

German policy—any national policy. What is One delegate said: "We have no room for ing, whilst refusing alliances with the Govern-has on the French masses will be weakened by Then we should only endure the lot which from the first and reiterated by General Smuts the menace of the big stick in the hands of might have been ours even had we fought the and other members of the Ministry. It was > helped to impose on others. Moreover, we should have lit a beacon in the hearts of men and women which would not be extinguished until the capitalist system and > its wars were destroyed for ever. Call the British troops back from Germany: the workers there will throw off the voke of

> Leave the French Government, if it will, to attempt the subjection of all Europe. Leave the French people to rebel under the strain of maintaining the resultant vast militarism. Leave the peoples of Europe to throw off the the forces with which they must contend.

SOUTH AFRICAN NEWS.

At the annual Conference of the South African Labour Party, held at Pretoria on Such things should not concern those who January 3rd, the following resolutions were carried unanimously:-

1. "That this Conference approves and endorses the agreement between Col. Creswell and General Hertzog, as defined in Col. Creswell's letter of April, 1923, and confirmed by General Hertzog in his reply of. April 19, both of which letters were published in the South African Press."

2. "That the South African Labour Party appreciates the actions taken by the British Empire Labour Congress in August, 1921, for the purpose of discussing matters of common interest and agrees to the request that the South African Labour Party be represented by five delegates, and that such delegates be elected at this conference, and that the Party incurs no financial liability in the matter of the delegates' expenses to the London Congress."

being already issued. Writs of execution and asked this question in Moscow at the sitting arrest have shown alarming increases also of the Executive of the Third International in energy and endless idealism direct and rule. right through the Cape Peninsula. It will, November, 1920, Trotsky and Karsky gave no therefore, be seen that in spite of South Africa clear answer. The explanations were con-"turning the corner" so many times, this fused. One said the fault lay with the civi year's insolvencies are well ahead of last service, another with the military. We now

At the South African Commercial Traveller's us is that the peasants did not want to con-Association held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, tinue the attack on European capitalism. A Johannesburg, at which 60 delegates were pre- soon as their property was secured against the sent, the view was generally expressed that it foreigner they would not war any more against was undesirable to admit lady commercial European capitalism. The peasants are the

When the scare cry is raised that the French the alternative? women in an organisation of this character. It was proletariat.

At the S.A. Party Congress Dinner Mr. Hallard, K.C., in referring to the colour bar said: "The recent decision in the Johannes. Party policy had always been that it would no And should our action result only in the tolerate the intrusion of black or coloured in South Africa. That was the policy laid down capitalists' war with all our fervour; we should an unalterable foundation of the S.A. Party only endure the lot which we have many times programme."

ISAAC VERMONT.

THE INTERNATIONAL WORKERS' REVOLUTION.

By HERMAN GORTER.

The proelamation by the Bolshevists of the right to self-determination of all nation caused the detaching from Soviet Russia Finland, the Baltic Provinces, Poland, Ukraine and the Caucasus. This resulted i the downfall of the proletarian revolution in most of these countries.

The self-determination slogan was a bourgeois-capitalist one. Either the Bolshevists proclaimed it from weakness in the fear the if they did not give these States their freedor they could not smash up Czarism, or, as i appears now, they wanted, even then, national Russian State. The doubts both to the power of Communism to triumph and the necessity of nationalism were inspired b the peasants.

The enrolment of the proletariat into the Red Army was a proletarian-Communist measure. The admission of the peasants in the army was a bourgeois-capitalist measure, for the peasants would, and will, prove themselves the enemies of Communism, both economically and militarily.

Undoubtedly the peasant was willing to fight against the counter-revolution, in so far as it threatened the private property of the peasants in the soil. The peasants fought against Yudenitch, Koltchak and Wrangle: The Bolshevists might be able to keep both the peasants and the Proletarians in the army by giving them better food and clothing than the could get outside, but could the peasants sti fight for the Bolshevists after their own private property was secured and the counter-revolu-travellers to membership. The Secretary ex- majority of the Russian Army. One must no or capitalist-Democratic one. A real prole- whole people." "Lovely!" I exclaimed, "and where have al power to the workers. It was bourgeois to Rosa Luxemburg did not understand that all "But I don't see why we should not grow eeds have proved them Communists.

ras also bourgeois-capitalist.

arty dictatorship will always become so. In and Communism. ader-dictatorship lies the kernel of the bourgeois-capitalist revolution, and in it is the reatest proof that the Russian revolution was hiefly, and in its origin, a bourgeois-capitalist bourgeois-capitalist. It began through the ower of the peasants, the non-proletarian lass. A party dictatorship could overpower nd lead the peasant class in Russia. A proletarian class dictatorship could not do this, for a dietatorship of the proletarian class will always aspire to pure Communism. Once it has the power to govern the proletariat will ented pure Communism from being achieved. The proletariat as a class could not lead the of a minority against the majority. lictatorship. This could only be done by a roletarian class would never do this. The sions; it will demand everything for itself. watchword will remain unto the end:

The party dictatorship was in its origin

The Bolshevist party held the dictatorship This party dictatorship, because of the might capitalist. the peasants, was of necessity mainly capiit was a despotism. It dictated to the workers Third International. what concessions they must make and what advantages were to be given to the peasants. It could not have been otherwise in a land so largely agrarian. Having originated from tion of the big landowners was no more? No, the power of the peasants, the dictatorship

We are proud that Rosa Luxemburg in her voice from the grave has painted the nature of the party dictatorship and its effect on the evolution, just as we have done. She says few dozen party leaders of inexhaustible Amongst them are in reality one dozen eminent heads who lead and an elite of the workmen which is called from time to time to applaud the speeches of the leaders and to table homes." believe the true answer which was kept from vote unanimously for the resolutions laid before them. At bottom, therefore, it is a lique arrangement—a dictatorship it is true; but not a dictatorship of the proletariat, simply a dictatorship of a handful of politicians; short, a dictatorship in the bourgeois sense.

"Yes: dictatorship . . . but this dictator- to such trivial circumstances." ship must be the work of the class and not With that parting shot she swept majesti-nger reckon on their assistance in a Euro- that of a leading minority in the name of the cally away. class: that is to say, it must, step by step, A genuine proletarian revolution will not arise from the active participation of the class, "These violets are lovely, are they not? have peasants in its army, for its army must remain under its direct influence, and be sub- And how the sweet scent brings the happy ordinated to the control of publicity and be springtime near," said Mrs. Vavasour, senti-The peace of Brest Litovsk was a bourgeois, the outcome of the political experience of the mentally.

arian revolution would have remained the The Communist Workers' Party and the these come from, so long before spring?"

n in Germany and England will not give dictatorship was possible there, because the place," I said innocently.

If-expression of the workers was also short, that the Bolshevists had built their "That's strange," said I, still speaking urgeois-capitalist. The workers and their party dictatorship not only out of the might of innocently. "A lady told me a few days ago ganisations did not get the leadership and the peasants, but that they were compelled to that such things make no difference. If the ontrol of industry, transport and distribution. use their dictatorship through the might of the violets are planted, even in poor soil, they The Bureaucratic despotism of the leaders peasants, for the bourgeois revolution in know when spring comes it is time to be is also bourgeois-capitalist. The corruption Russia. They used their party dictatorship growing." always more in the interest of the peasants— "Well that lady is a fool," said Mrs. Vava-The party dictatorship of the Bolshevists was that is to say, in the interest of capitalist sour with conviction. "Anyone with the the highest degree bourgeois-capitalist. private property, and against the proletariat smallest intelligence knows how much effect

> The productive and class conditions in Russia forced the revolution to be to a great extent a bourgeois one. The proletarian class edging away, "but that lady was yourselfconditions gave the Bolshevists the leadership. This leadership could not, on account of the productive and class conditions, be a class dictatorship; it had to be a party dictatorship, and these very conditions compelled the party dictatorship to be a bourgeois capitalist one.

Party dictatorship is typical of a bourgeois revolution, in a society based on private property. By such a revolution one class disposes another class, but itself remains on the Of course! not content itself with less. The enormous basis of private property. The newly risen

A bourgeois revolution is always a revolution

The proletarian revolution which aims at party—the Bolshevist Party, and this only by being truly Communist, must be a revolution introducing pure Communism, by making of the majority against the minority. There- which do not possess a wash-house. In such incessions to the peasants, the private fore it must take place, or at least have its houses washing day turns the kitchen into a wakened proletariat will not make conces- at least, represents the interests of the be squeezed in between periods of boiling majority, then it does not require a party "whites" and wringing "coloureds." Cold dictatorship, it has no need to cheat the meat for dinner always accompanies a wash-"We have been nothing: we shall be masses by such means. Then the dictator- ing day. When the copper lid is lifted clouds ship of the class is inevitable.

The Party dictatorship in Russia was the black with dampness, while the paper begins brough the might and power of the peasants. surest sign that the revolution was bourgeoist to peel off the wall. How the canary manages alistic. It dominated, instead of representing, the second period, a detailed exposure of the open-is beyond comprehension. he proletariat, over which it was the despot. fact that even in the first period of their power, Yet these hard-working house-wives who It may be that this dictatorship was inevitable; the Bolshevists showed their bourgeois-demo- weekly turn the wringer are well off when comit may be that, under the circumstances, it cratic or capitalist policy by their influence on pared with the woman "who takes in washwas the best that could be had; nevertheless, the proletariat other countries through the ing." These poor struggling ones are the

ENVIRONMENT.

"Rubbish!" snorted Mrs. Vavasour. of the Bolshevists was necessarily bourgeois- these people who live in slums want to leave being done. them, they can."

> asking," I replied mildly, "and wages will be What must the "professional washer-woman" raised to pay the bigger rents, I presume."

people whether they live in slums or not," bending over a tub and whirling the handle of retorted Mrs. Vavasour, smoothing her fur a wringing machine. And the payment, which coat with a caressing hand. "If they work is often as low as five shillings, can never be hard and save, instead of drinking and sufficient. The "hired help" who goes out to gambling, they will be able to live in respec- wash is even worse paid than this because she where are they to get their ideals from-these as one feeds a dog. people who live among dirt and squalor? " spark of manhood in him, he will rise superior the heroine does not live to see the fruits of nemy of all capitalist Powers, whilst waiting. Communist Workers' International can echo "Glorious Devon! where the sea laps at the for and assisting the rising of the proletariat the words of Rosa Luxemburg, but instead of foot of red cliffs, where the air is pure and the "whole people" we always read the untainted by the foul smoke of manufacturing ive it to the peasants. A proletarian revolu- this could not happen in Russia; that no class violets as nice as those, even in this dirty olitical power to such elements until their projetariat was too small and the peasantry "Rubbish!" cried Mrs. Vavasour. "Why, the smoke and the soot, the poor soil and the The suppression of the independence and She did not see, because her life was too lack of sunshine make it well-nigh impossible."

good soil and sunshine have upon flowers.

"I am very sorry, Mrs. Vavasour," I said, wait a minute-only you were speaking of men, not flowers."

She never talks to me now.

PROFESSIONAL WASHER-WOMEN.

"I rather like washing," said the lady at the villa. I stared. "Of course," she continued, "I send all the heavy things out."

No woman dislikes washing blouses or serlower, the great numbers of the peasants pre- class uses and cheats the class beneath it. viettes, but where can one find the woman who enjoys washing half-a-dozen blankets or two pairs of grimy, greasy overalls?

Washing day is the bane of all working-class families; particularly those who live in houses wners of the land, and to the capitalists. A beginning, in a truly proletarian country. miniature pawnshop; bundles of clothes If the revolution comes from the majority, or, scattered about in confusion. Cooking has to of steam fill the house, and the roof turns to live through this weekly occurrence of steam We shall postpone, till we have treated and draughts-doors and windows must be > slaves of the wringer. Not one day, but often four and five days they spend over the tubs. Widows with young families to support, and wives whose husbands are out of work, are condemned to carry the burden of others who can afford to pay for their unpleasant work

A house-wife once confided to me that she "Houses are to be had anywhere for the felt ten years older after a day's washing. feel like after four days? Four days among "I don't see what difference it makes to the steam and soap-suds! Four days spent has her meals provided. Meals which are only "Truly a worthy ideal," said I, "but too often given grudgingly and contemptuously

Such heroic struggling to keep the home "Every man is born with noble instincts," going and the family respectable must have said Mrs. Vavasour, loftily, "and if he has a its reward some day. The pity is that often Maorkers' Dreadnought Founded 1914. Eli or: SYLVIA PANKHURST.

All Matt er for Publication- To The Editor. Business Communications — To THE MANAGER WORKERS' DREADNOUGHT, 152, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.4. SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Three months (13 weeks) Six months (26 weeks) 3s. 3d. One year (52 weeks) 6s. 6d. Subscriptions can start from any week.

Vol. X. No. 48. Saturday, Feb. 16th, 1924.

Our View.

This Government is a Coalition Government, in fact, whatever it may be called in name, that factor must always be borne in mind. This has been, and will be, clearly evident in all its actions. If proof of this were needed, no better proof could be asked than Lord Chelmsford's statement, that Lord Parmoor, Lord Haldane, and he have agreed to enter the Government, being persons detached from politics, because the Government programme has been disclosed to them, and they have agreed to it.

Some Social Reform Measures will undoubtedly be introduced by the present Governat the last election, as a sign that the electors are impatient with existing conditions, and that some ameliorations are required to placate

The retiring King's Speech of Mr. Baldwin's Government was an admission of this view, and Mr. MacDonald admits that he will use the Baldwin speech as a quarry to which it would be safe to go for his reform materials. It must be clearly realised that any concession to popular need which may be looked for, ment. will be measured, as is always the case, by the extent of the pressure coming from the people outside.

The Parliamentary Session opened ignominiously, with an ill-mannered rush for seats, in which an old man was knocked down, and women members were thrust out of their places in the queue.

Questions at once revealed the old-time officialdom triumphing over that visionary "new spirit," which has been so lavishly Mr. Stephen Walsh adroitly scrapped an election pledge of Mr. Mac-Donald on pensions for ex-Army ranker

Mr. Snowden asserted, like his predecessors, that he is defending the interests of British traders against the refusal of the German Government to refund charges under the Reparation Recovery Act.

Mr. MacDonald indicated that the only reduction in Cabinet Ministers' salaries is that the Lord Chancellor had asked to be paid £6,000, instead of £10,000, and had relinquished the pension of £5,000, which he has been drawing for having done the same work before; also that Mr. MacDonald himself will be content to draw a salary only as Prime Minister, and will relinquish the further £5,000 a year he might get as Foreign Secretary. On the other hand, Mr. Clynes is to get £5,000 a year, instead of the usual £2,000 as Lord Privy Seal, because he is also acting as leader of the House of Commons. The office of Lord Privy Seal is, of course, one to which no duties are attached. In some of the wartime Coalition Cabinets, the salaries were pooled, but in reply to questions, Mr. Mac- fit is to apply in all cases which meet the Donald said that the whole question ought to conditions laid down. be reviewed, as it is most inequitable, but "I What further modifications may be introwill not agree to it being reviewed whilst we duced into Unemployment Insurance, and ourselves are in office, unless it comes spon- whether insurance is to replace the relief to taneously from the whole House of Com- the unemployed by Boards of Guardians, Mr.

under the new Government in this and every- fact, however, he has strongly emphasised.

"The expenses are enormous," Mr. Mac-Donald has told the press, but expenses of system that Mr. MacDonald has taken office. dining and wining the Government cliques, He does not regard the condition of private both national and international, are not com- enterprise as at all hopeless. He does not conpulsory, except to those, who are afraid to sider the patient as suffering from a mortal Post free. defy the conventions.

> As to "Poplarism," it is fighting its dur with the more Conservative elements in the Coalition behind the Labour Government. "Poplarism" is the policy of the dole and the bandaging of the sore wounds of poverty. It may wash the feet of the poor from pity, amongst the people as prophets of a new social and for the welfare of its soul, but it leaves the poor still in poverty. It will have to contend with the stern economies of the thrifty who a one was Dr. Hilferding, in Germany, whose once were poor, but who, through good constitutions, and the accentuated development recorded. of their acquisitive and managing facilities, are poor no longer. It will have to contend with the small prejudices and the impecuniosities of the small middle-class, the hardships of the small-wage workers, and the anxiety of Mr. MacDonald and his colleagues to prove they are not extravagant.

"Poplarism" has scored a point in the withdrawal of the Mond Order, and the surcharges which arose under it; but Mr. Mac-Donald has protested that this was only a small administrative matter, the revision of which was already under consideration by his ment, because every party has regarded the predecessors, and that its withdrawal is not increased support given to the Labour Party to be the signal that "the Red is to be flown by every Board of Guardians from Land's End to John o' Groats." It is not, he asserts, to be a charter of extravagance for the Boards of Guardians or any other spending body, for the Labour Government is seeking to secure the confidence of all classes.

One cannot attack capitalist vested interests and retain the confidence of those interests. That is clear, but obviously vested interests need fear no serious attack from this Govern-

Housing is the one question in which the Labour Government may be expected to produce tangible and substantial results. Heavy Government subsidies will be required to modify the prevailing capitalist conditions, in order to produce a large number of habitable dwellings at rents the workers can manage to pay. It will turn out to be an expensive business, attended by much profiteering. An army of non-producers will draw sustenance from the scheme. These things are inherent in the capitalist system. Nevertheless, from the vast costly mountain which will arise, it should MacDonald says. be safe to anticipate that enough houses will be brought forth to provide a definite easement of the over-crowding situation. Otherwise the political careers of Mr. MacDonald policy of the new Government. Liberals and and his colleagues will be truncated more Tories have tried to work the miracle and have quickly than would otherwise have been the failed. Why does anyone believe that Mr.

substantial will at last be done for housing, Government will be able to induce the workers are that the workers who build the houses to subordinate their interests and safeguards are to be brought more or less into direct consultation-and that the people who want, did during the war for their employers' victory. houses have grown impatient.

with which the working classes expect the politicians behind the screen of a Labour Gov-Labour Government to deal. Whoever may be ernment which can be blamed in case of persuaded that nothing much can be done by failure. palliative methods, the Labour Government asserts its competence to cope with the ques- formism of the MacDonald type is that whilst tion, and Mr. MacDonald declares that great Poplar attempts to patch up the disorders schemes are under weigh. He announces the which capitalism has created amongst the abolition of the gap, and of the selection of Have Nots, MacDonaldism attempts to deal

MacDonald has not made clear. We await It seems that tradition is to have its way the development of the scheme. One curious

> It is as physician-in-chief to the capitalist disease. Some drops of State medicine, from prescriptions already made up by his predecessors, he believes will induce a swift recovery. That is the really amazing fact about the Labour Government. Amazing as it is, however, it is not a new phenomenon in the world, that those who have won their way order, should take office with promises restore the old system to its full vigour. Such ignominious failure has but lately been uttered by Mr. MacDonald, in declaring to Parliament the policy of his Government:

"We shall therefore concentrate not firs of all on the relief of unemployment, but or the restoration of trade.

" We are not going to diminish industrial smack it. capital, in order to provide relief. . .

"I wish to make it perfectly clear that the Government have no intention of drawing off from the normal channels of trade can only be palliatives. . . .

dising schemes in direct relief of unemploy ment will be judged in relation to the greater necessity for maintaining undisturbed the ordinary financial facilities and resources trade and industry. . . .

"We therefore propose to speed up the trade facilities which lapsed in November, 1923, and which require to be re-invigorated. We shall deal with export credits, and extend the period for which they will operate. That does not mean that we shall require to ask for more money, because there are unexpended balances which will practically cover the extended period of the operations.

"The Cabinet . . . has to consider how far certain forms of taxes enter directly into the cost of production, and hamper the trade of the country, and how far certain other taxes are only taxes upon luxury." To consider taxation and the foreign exchanges, Mr. MacDonald proposes to set up a Committee of business men-no new proceeding! There is something of a decidely Lloyd Georgian flavour about much that Mr.

Calling capitalism back to health is the MacDonald may succeed where the older The strongest guarantees that something parties could not? Some believe that a Labour for the sake of their employers' trade, as they Some believe that temporary sacrifices which capitalism must make for its ultimate health Unemployment is the other great problem may be agreed to by the rival capitalist

The difference between Poplarism and Reuncovenanted benefit; the uncovenanted bene- with the disorders afflicting the Haves, so

FY - Killian and the same - to the working classes as before.

is colleagues declared necessary, nothing is keeping Italy out of Fiume. heard, but stories of the good impression * * * had better not."

says that the British relations with France such a responsibility may have been theirs. fellows, but owing allegiance to himself alone." Here are the most pregnant sentences were unfriendly when he arrived, and that he Nevertheless, we declare that the Moscow "Capitalism is like a mustard seed, which,

The Nationalisation of the land is an old build up Communism in their land. deal with agricultural produce.

as it does on the support of other parties, the next election.

proposals :-

(1) A revival of war-time Country Agricul- struggle. tural Committees, to consist of one-third farmers, and one-third labourers (nomby the Ministry.

tolerate bad cultivation.

tunities for the big industrialised farm." As ally be turned. and fell to it by dispossession and voluntary or compulsory purchase, the C.A.C. would farm it through a manager and Board, or lease it to individuals, companies, or cooperative groups.

Apparently these are quite indifferent to the Socialist I.L.P.

The olives of peace sported by the late exresident Wilson were already faded before . Harold Spender attempted to snatch them at their prosperity may be renewed, and from him the other day, in his story of the The Friend. By Adelaide Phillpotts. (Heinerumbs may fall from their well-laden tables secret pact for French occupation of the left mann, 7s. 6d.) This novel, by a new author, bank of the Rhine between Messrs. Wilson and contains the following interesting passages. To end capitalism is attempted neither by Clemenceau. Obviously, there was no secret, Mr. Webburn read a passage here and there oplar Labourism, nor by MacDonald Labour- but even Mr. MacDonald's desire to be on the stray papers:friendly to France cannot dim the effect cast "Civilisations have perished through war; by the revelation that Wilson agreed to the and education, which alone can destroy it, is Mr. MacDonald's foreign policy, if one may occupation even before Lloyd George. Signor being perpetually by it destroyed. . . . Educadge from his first Parliamentary utterance Orlando further discloses the inconsistencies tion is promoted by the free mingling of all as Prime Minister, already approximates much of the late ex-President, by explaining that classes in the community and all races in the more closely to that of its predecessors than Wilson accepted the French plans for occupy- world. . . . Thereby diverse individuals come t did when he was in opposition. Instead of ing the left bank of the Rhine in order that into collision-strike the fire of thought from hat firm treatment of France, which he and Clemenceau would support his own scheme for the flint of the brain. . . . Electricity should ich Mr. MacDonald has made upon France. The theory of Moscow's infallibility in tion. . . . Liberty is that state in which a man The Labour Premier is at pains to show his directing the world revolution will be some- can develop to their full capacity all his riendliness towards the French Government, what shaken by the complaints of Zinovief worthiest powers—which obtains from him the even dropping into the phrase, "M. Poincaré that it was Radek who frustrated the German fullest and best expression of himself, and nd I," as though to emphasise the perfect revolution at the opportune moment, by in- renders him wholly self-responsible. . . nderstanding which has been arrived at. ducing the Moscow executive to call a halt. Liberty cannot exist without organisation and When Mr. McNeill, Lord Curzon's late assis- We fear that such an obedient revolution as order, which themselves are dependent on law ant, asked the Labour Premier to explain that conceived by Comrade Zinovief would and rule. . . . Man, to be free, is not neceswhere his policy differs from that of his pre- have been a very tame little mouse, indeed, sarily to be fettered—to be kneaded into any

When out of office, Mr. MacDonald never the Moscow executive of the III. International, ideal to be aimed at is for man to become his ired of complaining that Britain was being the power to hold back so easily a full-blooded own master—his own sovereign—each man a made the tool of French policy; in office he revolution, even though the desire to assume State unto himself, without interfering with his

is now pursuing the task of reconciliation. executive has failed in such propaganda and being planted in the world, has germinated, Having adopted the rôle of the all-wise organisation as is necessary to prepare the thrust down roots, heaved forth branches, so mentor of Europe, perhaps Mr. MacDonald way for Communism. It and its German aux- that the human birds of the earth—the more proposes to grant his reassuring forgiveness iliary have failed steadily to point out to the fortunate—can lodge in the shade of it; while to the erring Power before he proceeds to German workers that their hope of emancipa- others, less lucky, threaten to set axe at the tion lies in the downfall of the private property roots, hack down the tree, and burn it. . . . system, and that they themselves can alone But this prodigy of economic horticulture will popular slogan, to which Mr. MacDonald gave In spite of the failures of both Socialists and Gargantuan growth, limbs of which have no encouragement in his programme, although Parliamentary Communists, however, the already withered, will continue to be modified large sums for extemporised measures which the I.L.P. has just issued a report on the ques- workers of Germany are still moving left- by evolution, and, let us hope, turned, like tion. He promises a scheme for agricultural ward. Whilst in Thuringia, the Socialist primeval trees, into something more beneficial "The necessity of expenditure for subsi- rating reform, and Government loans or guar- vote at the recent election dropped from to humanity than it now is. Out of its knotty tees to start co-operative enterprises for 265,000 to 145,000, the Communist vote rose wood may good coal be formed, to light fires upplying manure, machinery, and so on, and from 73,000 to 163,000. In a little while the in the brightness and heat of which all future workers will realise that they must take other men may rejoice." Obviously, composed as it is, and depending action and other policies.

> carry a measure of land nationalisation through would be ill-advised to place any hopes on ought to be: That the livelihood and welfare what might emanate from the proffered en- of an individual do not depend upon his em-The I.L.P., however, has just declared for quiry into the defects in the working of the playment. This principle involves the recogis reform, and has produced a report giving present machinery of Indian Government. nition of a new relationship between the worker s views on the subject, in order to prepare We do not think the non-co-operators will pay and his work, and his work and his wages. . . . the way for realising the project, perhaps, the least attention to such an offer. They Now men must work that they may eat, and

> This report, coming from an alleged Socialist colm Hailey gave to the suggestion that the be paid, not for the commercial value of their organisation, is really a remarkable document. Government of India should be transferred labour, not even for their willingness to toil, Having declared that the land should be from Westminster to the Indian legislature but because they are men and must live. This ationalised, it apparently proceeds to ignore and that Dominion Home Rule should be new link between men and money, replacing is own dictum, and puts forward the follow- accorded, shows that the independence move- that between money and unemployment, might ment will not be allowed to win without a gradually bring about the abolition of money, > inated through the respective unions in lows the railway companies to take "discip- hopefully to build on the treacherous sand of each case), one-third experts nominated linary action" in the event of any "breach" dreams, in spite of their perpetual demolition of "amicable working" between railwaymen, by the succeeding waves of time." (2) The C.A.C. should have power to dist which really means between the members of miss tenants who cultivate below the stan- the rival railway unions, is a serious matter. DEAR EDITOR, dard, or to dispossess landlords who The clause permits the railway companies to It seems to me that it is necessary to unify interfere in the relation between Union and all those who agree that Parliament is an insti-One would not expect to find landlords when Union, worker and worker; indeed it permits tution used by the masters to bolster up their he land had been nationalised-but this, re- the companies to be the sole arbiter in such "bandit system." The capitalist Press mber, is I.L.P. Socialism—we are assured disputes. That the rival Unions have agreed it it is a special brand. The report adds:— to it shows how far they have fallen in solid- for taking office, because it is thereby hoped to All proposed transfers of tenancy should arity. The Union which makes the strongest make discontented workers believe salvation is be registered with the C.A.C., which should fight for its members is the Union against in store for them though being governed by promote arable farming, and " make oppor- which the bias of the companies will natur-

YOUR SUBSCRIPTION

A blue mark in this space indicates that your subscription is now due.

The high cost of production of the paper necessitates prompt payment.

help to destroy war. . . . ''

"Liberty is character. . . . Liberty is educadecessors, Mr. MacDonald replied; "I think had it appeared. sort of artificial state dough and baked hard We cannot attribute, either to Radek or to in the oven of political despotism. . . . The not endure for ever. We may expect that this

"There is only one remedy for the evils of unemployment. . . . The principle, which is the lacDonald Government could not hope to The movement for Indian Independence corner-stone of the ideal temple of industry, should the Labour Party secure a majority in will require something much more tangible. eat just so much as the value in money set The "emphatic negative" which Sir Mal- upon their work can buy. . . . Men ought to and substitute for it that free service of mankind by mankind, Utopian models of which The Railway Strike agreement, which al- the architects of ideals continue patiently and applauds the leaders of the Labour movement their leaders.

Capitalism is now in a stage of progressive E. SYLVIA PANKHURST. collapse. There is only one chance of its stabilisation. That is, if the workers can be induced to put their faith in a Labour Government. Those who favour an entire change of system are boycotted. All Governments aim at, and are the result of the apathy and ignorance of the many who sanction them. All Government, by parties, or groups, tends to suppress the liberty of the individual mind to express its thought. The Parliamentary Communist Party must be classified with other parties, because their policy is the leadership newspapers put Merrick on trial and convicted of individuals who claim the right to dictate to him in their columns. In news items he was Third Banker: the party by right of "leadership," and who referred to as "the dynamiter," and editorialclaim also the right to govern the mass of ly the authorities were congratulated for runworkers.

individually in ourselves to educate the workers and great fears were expressed at the power to what Communism really means before we held by an organized Communist group in can expect any progress in our social con- Haverhill. He is not running the repair shop ditions. We cannot have a system of Com- now. After his arrest business dropped away munism without a majority of mankind being and the rent for his place was doubled. He conscious Communists. When this is accom- had to quit. Merrick is married and has lived plished, and the sooner the better, there will in and around Haverhill all his life, being born Third Banker: be no need to talk about Communism; it will a short distance from the city. be here.

I am, yours fraternally,

Dundee.

THE MERRICK FRAME-UP.

"Essex County, Massachusetts, bears an Ettor-Giovannitti case it world-famous, and tee. the planting of dynamite by that tool of the mill barons, Breen, with the intent of throwing blame on the striking workers, is equally well known. The masters are making another desperate attempt to railroad an active worker, but his time the scene of the plot is laid in the shoe city of Haverhill in the same county. We refer to the Merrick case.

"In January, 1923, a dynamite bomb was found near the shoe factory of Knipe Bros., Inc., in the Ward Hill district, Haverhill, Mass. The plant had been on strike since the previous October. The firm had just secured an injunction declaring the strike illegal and prohibiting picketing. But despite the injunction the firm could not get workers, and they found that injunctions did not make shoes. A short time after the injunction was issued the "bomb" was found. Great excitement prevailed in Haverhill! News articles and editorials pictured the city in the hands of the "Reds," "Communists," "Radicals," etc., and the police-State, Federal and City-were urged to get busy. For two weeks no arrests were made, although various people known to be radicals were grilled by the police. One morning the captain of the Haverhill police-Captain Hussey-held a conference with the turesque in diction than is the same author's Knipe Bros. firm. That evening the police Machine Wreckers. It contains, however, announced that the firm was to offer a some striking passages; for instance, the grue-$2000.00 reward for the arrest and conviction some song of the people's sentries in the of the perpetrators. A few days later John E. courtyard: Mearrick was arrested by the local police, al- First Sentry (sings): though State officers were working on the

"Merrick was running a small automobile repair shop in Haverhill at that time. He had been compelled to take up this work because Second Sentry: the bosses saw to it that he could not get work in the factories. He had been too active. He was called down to the local police sta- All the Sentries: tion for the apparent purpose of being questioned. While he was in the police station being questioned the local police staged a raid Third Sentry: on his shop. They "found" wire, solder, bits, a part of a wooden box, and the back of an alarm clock with two small screws standing on their heads near it, all of which material they claimed was part of the material used in the construction of the bomb. When these things were brought to the police station Merrick was placed under arrest. He was held in $20,000.00 bonds and no one was allowed to see him. At the preliminary hearing the charge of being a principal was dropped and he was held over for he Grand Jury on the charge of accessory. The bail was doubled to $40,000.00 on one charge. The bail was later reduced to $15,000.00 by the Supreme Court, and friends of Merrick secured the bail and had him released. The police claim that there was dynamite in the bomb, but up to date no one but the police and members of the firm of Knipe Bros. have seen the dynamite. It was not produced in court at the time of the hearing. The Grand Jury indicted Merrick on two counts-principal and accessory.

"Immediately after the arrest the local vorkers.

I am of opinion that the only hope lies He was held up as an "avowed communist,"

Fourth Banker:

"His trial is due to come up in January. He has absolutely no money. His friends have financed him up to date, both personally and by means of appeals to the working class throughout the country. The Workers' Defence Conference of New England investigated the case and helped to the best of their ability. He needs money now badly in order to secure unsavoury notoriety for its frame-up attempts proper representation in court."-From the on active members of the working class. The Lawrence General Labour Defense Commit-

FROM THE PUBLISHERS

Masses and Man. A fragment of the Social Revolution of the Twentieth Century. By Ernst Toller, translated from the German by Vera Mendel. (The Nonesuch Press,

Toller says of this play that, when he wrote t, "the immensity of the days of revolution had not yet formed an ordered mental picture."

The play is, in fact, chaotic and confused. Apparently it is a plea for a bloodless revolution: a demand that the revolution shall be a strike and not a war. But it may be that Toller is merely intending to portray the struggles of the idealist amid conflicting impulses and considerations. The Nameless may either have been intended to represent the baser passions and spirit of mob cruelty against which the Woman, the idealist, is contending, or Toller may have intended the Nameless to represent inevitable necessity. The play is less beautiful, varied and pic-

My mother bore me-In a ditch one night, Lalala la Hm, hm.

Father spawned and ignored me

In his cups one night.

Lalala la Hm, hm.

Three years they shove me-'Tis a jailbird's plight. Lalala la

Hm, hm. From anywhere the Nameless approaches with ghostly, noiseless steps. Stands behind First Sentry:

My father maintained me-But forgot to pay. All the Sentries:

Lalala la Hm, hm.

Second Sentry: My mother—in pain she Walks the streets, as they say. All the Sentries: Lalala la

Hm, hm. A bitter contempt for the proletarian mob betrays itself there and in other passages.

Contempt for the greedy, vulgar bourgeoisis is also shown. Thus on the Stock Exchange

> It sounds a good thing; What's the product?

We call it Convalescent Home; For strengthening the Will to

> In fact, it is State-managed brothel.

Splendid! I'll take up One hundred thousand. One more question, Who organises?

Fourth Banker: Experienced generals, Connoisseurs,

Of tested regulations. Third Banker:

Is the system Planned?

Fourth Banker: By regulation, As I said. Three prices And three categories. Brothel for officers, Stay over night. Brothel for non-coms, Stay one hour. And the third brothel, Men in the ranks,

Third Banker: I thank you;

When does market open?

Stay fifteen minutes.

There are indications that when Toller wrote this play he was beset by a torturing pessimism. In a dream-picture The Woman is shown in a cage. Beside her is the guide in the form of a warder. He tells her that she is in "the showhouse of humanity." Headless shadows appear and accuse her of their deaths because she kept silence at the storming of the town hall, when weapons were stolen, when the reserves were called up. She protests her innocence, then declares: "I am guilty:"

The guide in the dress of a warder replies:

You fool! You sentimentalist! Were they alive They'd dance about the gilded altar, Where thousands offered sacrifice. You, too.

The Prisoner: I am guilty Being man!

The Warder: Masses are guilty.

The Prisoner: Then I am doubly guilty.

The Warder: All life is guilt. The Prisoner:

But, then, it had to be That I am guilty?

That is.

The Warder: Each lives his life. Each dies his death. As trees and flowers, So do men Grow in a pre-ordained And fated form. A form created in unfolding And in its own destruction Still created. Find the answer For yourself. But life is all

This is a prisoner's play, written amid the first gloomy horror of the prison following o the crushing defeat of high, bright hopes an Prisoners will recognise the dark, hopeless angrily to fetch him. mood under which it was created.

THE FOUNDER OF THE JESUITS.

GNATIUS LOYOLA. By Henry Dwight Sedgwick. Macmillan, 15/- net.

The author of this work ealls it an attempt " an impartial biography." He confesses, vertheless, an admiration for Ignatius Loyola, the founder of the Jesuits, or Society of Jesus, and claims him as the foremost n spite of his admiration, Mr. Sedgwick does succeed in making Loyola an inspiring ily in the Basque province of Guipuscoa, Lovola was in early youth a rather wild, rivolous young soldier. It is recorded that he tempted, without justification, to claim enefit of clergy in order to escape punishment r some riotous scrape.

When the French crossed the Pyrenees to vade Spain in 1521, and marched on Pamplona, Loyola, who was in the Pamplona arrison, was wounded in the leg. His recovery is said to have dated from the feast of St. Peter and St. Paul, and he ascribed it to he intervention of St. Peter. The saint had, wever, done his work indifferently, for the bone had been badly set, and had to be reoken. The convalescence was slow, and uring its progress Loyola apparently became t the Salvation Army would call " saved."

erpent. This gave him great consolation, itself. as from the devil.

God, or the mule, letting the reins hang loose egg which Luther hatched. on the mule's neck. The mule decided to go raight on, and the Moor was spared.

Loyola devoted himself to securing an educa- for three years, and thereafter only to do so if tion, and spent twelve years in schools and licensed by the proper authority. Loyola, so colleges in Spain and Paris. As a pupil of 34 strict a disciplinarian for others, was deterhe began in the grammar school with little mined not to submit. He appealed to the tion in Germany were the two movements now of Salamanca, and offered money for the stirring Europe. The latter was seriously journey. The offer was accepted, and the menacing the prestige of the reactionary and young men continued their preaching, which corrupt Roman Catholic Church. Pope was probably their only means of livelihood. paniard at the time of Spain's chief glory. Leo X. required much money to maintain the Loyola was the youngest of eight sons. He Papal dominion over sundry Italian cities, as had been brought up from childhood by the well as for the upkeep of his hunting lodge Governor of Arevalo, and at the Governor's at La Magliana, for jewels, for Latin and death his widow apparently only gave Lovola Born in 1495, the son of an aristocratic Greek manuscripts, and for building the two horses and a purse of 500 crowns. He basilica of St. Peters. Therefore he issued seems to have disposed of these very soon. "indulgences" which were hawked about all The young preachers were soon in prison over Europe. A quotation from an advertise- again. After twenty-two days they were ment of the indulgences displayed by the hawk> a soul in Purgatory, at once sets that 2 souls, or a 1,000 for a 1,000 souls, they go forth to Paradise."

Such indecencies were the strength of the Lutheran movement for ecclesiastical reform. seems to have been befriended by enthusiastic Loyola was for reaction in all directions: he ladies, who nursed him, fed him, provided hated both the Renaissance and the Reforma- him with lodging or money. On this occasion tion. He disliked and feared the devotion to he went first to Barcelona, and there was beauty and the intellectual inquiry, the art assisted by women who sent him on his way to After this he took to seeing visions, to fast- and the literature, the study of history and Paris with a bill of exchange for 25 crowns g and sometimes spent seven hours upon his science that were characteristic of the Renais- in his pocket to sustain him during his studies. nees, and flogged himself three times a day. sance, even more than he opposed the Reforma- The money was stolen from him by a fellow At times he saw a beautiful creature resembling tion which was a direct attack on the Church Spaniard who lodged at the same inn. Loyola time he changed his mind, and decided it who was received with honour in Paris, Rome, advice of a friend, he went to Bruges and Venice, and Padua, and became Margaret Pro- Antwerp, where rich Spanish merchants gave Loyola set off from Pamplona riding on a fessor of Divinity and Professor of Greek at him the money he required to return to Paris , and fell in with a Moor by the way. Cambridge, was more hated by Loyola than and study there. In 1529 he began a course ola attempted to convince the Moor that Luther himself. Erasmus attacked the corrup- in philosophy, and after three years took a mother of Christ was in truth a virgin. tion of the ecclesiastics, though he did not master's degree. Then he began a theological he Moor was willing to admit that she might break away from the Church. He translated course, but left Paris without completing it be a virgin after she had conceived, but the New Testament, and wrote in Latin a work He did not preach in the street whilst in Paris, uld not understand how it was possible for called Enchiridon Militis Christiani, at the re- but drilled some of his fellow students in his her to be still a virgin after the birth of the quest of a lady, in order that he might arouse "Spiritual Exercises." He was twice brought wished to gallop after him and stab him in the but, according to his own story, felt a numb- approved, and he was not punished. When he reached the point in the road ness of the soul and was obliged to lay it the Spanish inquisitors. Whilst at the Univer-Having given up his mule, and taken the sity of Alcalá de Henares, he and some com-Igrim's dress of sackcloth, with staff and panions begged their bread, and wore sack. Sedgwick's account may be relied on Loyola ourd, Loyola took to begging, and in 1523 cloth garments. They prayed in the streets desired to endeavour that in his order there set off for Jerusalem to convert the Turks to and discoursed to their admirers in their Christianity. He sailed from Barcelona. The lodgings. They were suspected of being captain gave him a free passage, but insisted "illuminate," persons who follow inward poverty and chastity. It is true that in his at he should bring his food, and not play the illumination, rather than the teachings of the own person he seems, in his youth, to have beggar on board. Many others were making Church, a habit the Church would not tolerate. the same pilgrimage in those days, and After an inquiry before the Vicar General, aritable persons helped the beggars upon they were ordered, on pain of excommunication, to doff their sackcloth and conform to the Jerusalem Loyola was received into the ordinary dress of clergy or laity in the nciscan monastery, but when he announced Kingdom of Castile. In spite of his doctrine intention to remain in Jerusalem saving that a person should believe what seems to , the prior refused him permission, and him to be black is white, if the Hierarchical e him orders to leave at once. The Roman Church says so, Loyola was indignant at being holic authorities evidently did not wish to questioned by the Church authorities. He and e friction with the Turks on account of his friends changed the colour of their smocks r-zealous disciples. Loyola agreed to obey and continued holding services as before. prior. Desiring to make a last visit to Those who attended the services of Loyola the Mount of Olives, to see what are said to be and his friends seem to have been mainly the imprints of Christ's feet on the stone, he women, a large number being girls of 16 or 17 ent without guide or permit, contrary to years. They were seized with fainting and urkish rules. He secured admission by hysterical attacks during the prayers and bing the guard with the gift of his penknife, preaching. A second investigation was soon having forgotten which way the footprints held by the Church into the activities of ointed, went back again to see, and procured Loyola. In April, 1527, he was arrested by nother look by a gift of his scissors. On the the ecclesiastical authorities and later brought home a messenger sent by the friars came before the Vicar General. He was ordered to (Charles V. of Germany) to be Emperor of wear the ordinary dress of clergy or laity, and Returning to Spain after twelve months, to refrain from teaching or holding meetings Church reform, his sister Marguerite had Archbishop of Toledo, who merely advised The Renaissance in Italy and the Reforma- Loyola and his friends to go to the University found orthodox and liberated. They were ing "pardoners" is given by Mr. Sedgwick: given permission to preach provided they would not touch on the difference between "Whoever puts into the box a tester for mortal and venial sins. Loyola said he could not abide by the sentence. No doubt the spice soul free, and the soul infallibly goes to would have been taken out of his teaching, both Paradise; so, by putting in 2 testers for for himself and his pupils, if he might not adjudicate on the confessions of frail women. He therefore departed for Paris.

At almost every stage of his career Loyola again took to begging his bread, but this interhe believed it came from God, but after The famous Erasmus, the Dutch scholar fered with his studies, and finally, on the

Finally the Moor tired of the argument her profligate husband to duty and religion. up before the Catholic inquisitors, but his and rode on. When he had gone Loyola Loyola was advised to read this latter work, book of "Spiritual Exercises" was this time

Whilst in Paris Loyola fell in with Pierre here he knew the Moor had turned aside, down. The leaders of the Catholic Church Lefèvre, with whom he shared a room, and e could not make up his mind whether to turn eventually condemned the Enchiridon, and the whom he induced to fast, to sleep on logs of aside and follow to run the Moor through or Jesuits denounced Erasmus as a heretic. The wood and to meditate in the snow. Loyola not. He allowed the matter to be decided by monks declared that Erasmus had laid the gathered in Paris a small band of young masters of philosophy who became his first Loyola himself was suspected of heresy by disciples in founding the Society of Jesuits.

Mr. Sedgwick insists that Ignatius Loyola was a reformer. It is true that, if Mr. should be neither corruption nor self-indulgence, but a spartan adherence to the vows of practised with much vigour his precepts on the mortification of the flesh.

He stood, however, pre-eminently for the dark cruelty and superstition of the middle ages against reform and in opposition to all tendencies towards enlightenment.

Mr. Sedgwick quotes documentary evidence which proves that Loyola was unctuously slavish towards powerful personages, both spiritual and temporal, in order to win their support for his order, or to remove their

The persecution of heretics was at its height whilst he was studying in Paris. He had neither sympathy for the victims nor condemnation for the cruelties. His only effort was to ingratiate himself with the rich and powerful, whatever evils they might be guilty of. Francis I. of France was in those days disputing the right of Charles I. of Spain Germany. Francis at first appeared to favour openly befriended the reformers, and his mother, Louise of Savoy, had shown similar tendencies. When, however, Francis was defeated and taken prisoner by the forces of Charles at the Battle of Pavia, Louise, acting as regent, endeavoured to gain the Pope's support, by attacking the reformers. The Paris University, the Sorbonne and the Parlement were pillars of reaction, and alike opposed to the Protestants. Louise now asked the Sorbonne for advice "how to eradicate Luther's damnable doctrine from their very Christian land." Decrees were issued prohibiting the printing or owning of the Bible in France. A young man accused of heresy had his tongue pierced and was strangled. His body was burned in the Place Maubert. A Lutheran, who said there was no advantage in praying for the dead, sprinkling holy water or worshipping images, narrowly escaped death and was sent to prison on bread and water for seven years. A deacon accused of heresy was burned alive in the Place de Grève. In 1527 a clerk was buried alive in the same square for blasphemy. In December of that year a boatman was burned there also for Lutheran heresy. A friend of Erasmus, who had translated the Enchiridon into French, was strangled and burnt. In 1534 three hundred persons were arrested, and there were many hangings and burnings in public squares. Men were suspended over fires and burnt alive whilst the populace looked on. There were processions of expiation, in which Francis I. walked bare-headed, carrying a wax taper and accompanied by Church dignitaries and nobles. The hangings and burnings continued till. Francis found it necessary to come to an understanding with the German Protestants and the Pope, Paul III., thought it advisable that the terror should be stopped. Religious zeal against the heretics then conveniently abated.

Loyola approved these atrocities, and had nothing to say against the ambitions of their unscrupulous perpetrators. He interceded with the Apostolic See to get the fearful Inquisition set up in Portugal to please King John of Portugal.

The inconsistency of the founder of the Jesuits is plainly instanced by his attitude towards begging. He lived for many years by it himself, and, indeed, was ostentatious in his parade of begging his food to show his poverty. He criticised the "Teatini," an order of monks, founded shortly before his own, because they were not allowed to beg for food, but had to wait till it was given them.

Nevertheless, on returning to his native place in 1535, he procured the passage of an ordinance to punish begging. He boasted of this in his memoirs. The ordinance provided that the sheriffs and other officers should choose two citizens, one a cleric, the other a layman, to collect alms for the poor. These alms they should distribute amongst the poor "according to their needs and qualities." Only those poor who had been investigated and listed as unable to work should be entitled to alms. No alms were to be given to mendicants from outside the jurisdiction except those who were unable to work, or who were on a pilgrimage, and even such as these might only be harboured one night in the city.

any hospital, house, or Church, whether in this province or out of it, shall dare to ask any alms, whether from door to door or in any other manner."

Breach of the ordinance was to be punished in the case of the beggar by imprisonment and strokes of the cat; in the case of the donor by fines. Directors of hospitals, who admitted into their hospitals beggars from outside the jurisdiction or persons capable of working, were to be imprisoned and fined.

Strange regulations these from a man who was supposed to be living by door to door begging at the time!

Loyola is supposed to have walked from his native place to Venice, where he lived a year, waiting the arrival of the nine disciples he had enrolled in his new order. Meanwhile, he studied at the University, and prayed at the bedside of incurables. Isabel Roser, who frequently befriended him, provided the means for his support. In the following spring the Jesuits went to Rome, and procured the consent of the Pope to the charter of their order, which most particularly expressed its allegiance to the Pope, "The Roman Pontiff" and "Vicar of Christ." The Pope, Paul III., fresh from subduing riots caused by his own salt taxes, expressed his approval on September 3rd, 1539, and about a year later a "bull of confirmation" was issued.

The Society of Jesus pledged its members to unquestioning obedience to the Pope, and also to its General, whom they were to "acknowledge and reverence" as though he were

Christ, "present in person."

Loyola it was who drew up this provision, of course, intending that he would be the General of the order. Later on, after he had become the General, he drew up the constitution of the order. It was here stated that the members must obey the Superior in everything on the mere indication of his will, and that they must "think as the Superior thinks," and believe what he ordains is right, " laying aside, in blind obedience, their own opinions."

After the Pope had approved the order of Jesuits he appointed its members to teach the boys of Rome. The teaching can hardly have had other than bad results, the doctrines of the Society and its founder being so morbid and terrible. Loyola was excessively jealous of his authority, and fierce in his punishments. He advocated flagellation and fasting and mortification of the flesh for young people. He liked to see them neglectful, even dirty in person, regarding this as proper to the young. A youth who found it distasteful to work in the dirty kitchen of the monastery rolled himself in filth, in the hope of overcoming his repugnance to dirt, and in this state returned to his labours in the kitchen. Loyola commended his act.

Father Rodriguez, one of the first members of the order, when journeying with his companions, was offered a bed in which the sheets were dirty and spotted with blood. He went to another hostel in disgust, and afterwards blamed himself because he had not accepted a dirty bed as an exercise in humility. Soon after he was offered sheets which, he was told, had been placed under the dead body of a man who had died of the "lousy disease." He eagerly accepted these sheets, because he saw great lice upon them, and hoped, by suffering the vermin to bite him, he would atone for his previous pride. The lice, it is recorded, did their part in punishing him for his previous pride.

If this is not true, it has been set down as true by the Jesuit chroniclers.

Later on the same Rodriguez became head of the Jesuit Mission in Portugal. It is not surprising to learn that, under his influence, such excesses were committed in the Jesuit College there, that responsible persons protested. For an exhibition of humiliation, to which they had not been ordered by Rodriguez, two students were boycotted by his command, no one being permitted to speak to them. To placate Rodriguez, one of them entered the refectory bare foot, his hands tied and a cord round his neck, to which his tongue "No alms gatherers or solicitors from was tied between two sticks. The other delinquent came in stripped to the waist, a rope round his neck, and a scourge in hand. These acts of penitence were unacceptable to Rodriguez, because they had not received his permission.

Another lad, whom Rodriguez had refused admission to the college, overcame the denial, by walking through the streets, carrying a skull, and asking the crowd of boys which followed to kick him and throw stones at him. One of the students went through the streets, ringing a bell and shouting: "Hell for all those who are in mortal sin!" Another went out half naked, and tying himself to a pillar in the town, stood there some time, crying: "O Lord Jesus, who for our sins wast tied to a pillar in Pilate's house, forgive the sins of this city!"

Though it was clear that Rodriguez was causing trouble in Portugal, Loyola retained him there for some time, because Rodriguez had become a favourite of the King.

Some curious incidents are recorded of the visit of the Jesuit fathers to Ireland, in 1542 Henry VIII. was then endeavouring to secure his own recognition as the temporal and spiritual head of Ireland and to stamp out Roman Catholicism there. The three strongest Irish princes had been summoned to Dublin to pledge their allegiance to Henry, and two of them had already obeyed. The mission of the Jesuits was to establish peace between the princes of Ireland, in order that they might unite against Henry. They reported their failure, declaring the disease of internal feud to be incurable.

Whilst in Ireland the Jesuits granted pardons for bastardy and incest, of which they wrote there was "a vast amount." They explained the matter thus:

" Many of these pardons we gave gratis for love of God. From a few we collected some money, but not much, because the country is incredibly poor and we did not wish to get their money, but to lift them out of sin; for, pardon or no pardon, they would go on doing the same way till the day of their deaths, as ample experience testifies. But all the money collected we gave away publicly to the poor or to some pious charities, to the great astonishment and edification of the bishops who saw it, and of others who heard of it."

The italies are ours. It is interesting to observe that the Jesuits assumed incest to be harmless, once they had given a pardon for it.

Humanity has travelled some little distance in enlightenment since the sixteenth century; but the Churches are still playing their part in fostering superstition. The following passages from Bishop William Montgomery Brown's "Christianism or Communism?" form a fitting conclusion to this review:

"Knowledge is the Christ of the World. The saviour-gods of the supernaturalistic interpretations of religion are symbols of this one.

"Ignorance is the devil of the world. The destroyer-gods of the supernaturalistic interpretations of religion are symbols of this one.

"Knowledge consists in knowing facts and truths. Every real fact or truth is a word of the only gospel which the world possesses.

"The desire and effort to learn facts, interpret and live them constitute morality."

SPICE. HERRIN AGAIN.

Do not imagine that the Ku Klux Klan war in Williamstown County, Illinois, U.S.A., is about Prohibition. It is a continuation of the bitter Labour struggle which has been going on between the miners and the employing class there for a long time.

FOR EXCESSIVE BRUTALITY. To Sir John Butcher, a peerage.

THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

Mr. Baldwin has created five more Privy Councillors. On reflection, what a terrible body the Privy Council must be!

LORD CHELMSFORD.

Mr. Maxton, M.P., believes that Lord Chelmsford was taken into the Labour (? Cabinet because "the Sea Lords put down their foot."

COMMUNIST WORKERS' MOVEMENT Meetings.

Sundays, 3 p.m., Hyde Park. N. Smyth and others.

Sunday, March 2nd. 7.30 p.m. Hamilton Hall, 375, High Road, Willesden Green Sylvia Pankhurst and others.

Published by E. Sylvia Pankhurst, at 152, Floo Street, London, E.C. 4, and printed by Agenda Press, Ltd. (T.U.), at 10, Wine Office Court, London, E.C. 4.