THE MISSION OF THE CIVIC FEDERATION.

diplomacy and war, the mailed fist and gloved hand, boxing or jiupilsu. So in the war between laboring and exploiting class-in America we find the Employers' Association waging open warfare and we find the Civic Federation seeking to accomplish the same end through cunning and deceit.

There are still great masses of the working class who can be kept in bounds with the story that there is no war. They can be quietly led to slaughter, blindfolded by the tradition that they are moving among friends. To this class the Civic Federation addresses itself.

Making use of the new Japanese principle in athletics to let the exertions of the victim be his own destruction, they attempt to seize upon the very weapons of defense of the working class and use them to break working class resistance. Through the use of cajorery and the bribery of social distinction and flattery, they entrap those whom the least intelligent of the organized workers have elected as their leaders in the economic struggle. They depend upon these foolish leaders to maintain a state of social peace between the tiger and his

With vampire-like cunning they fan the leaders of the army of labor with soft words, while they suck the lifeblood of the men whom he represents. Such an organization is infinitely more deadly than one that fights in the open. Even a thirteen-inch shell may be fortified against, but the poisoned dagger creeps within the defences and carries death even while the wielder breathes vows of friendship

But the class struggle like every fact will not down. It is here it is in the midst of us, it breaks through every subterfuge. When wives and children are suffering amidst plenty, men will demand more of the boundless product their toil creates. Profit taking greed will oppose these demands and the clash comes.

So it has come during the past year, but weakened and unnerved by an unholy alliance the unions have been to a large degree helpics in the face of their foe. To be sure they have made great resistanc. Never before have they seen their enemy so strong, so compactly oranized, so ready for the fray. Nevertheless the workers fight with the forces of social evolution on their side, and they might perchance have won had their leaders not been drugged with Civic Federation wine and speeches, and their membership befogged with "identity of

One body of men within ranks of the workers have from the beginning cried out against the danger when "Greeks come bearing gifts." They have pointed out that the forces that were behind the Civic Federation were the forces against which union labor must fight. Their continuous exposure of the assassin-like character of this organization has told. Its officials have sent forth screech after screech of pain at the thrusts sent home by Socialist writers, speakers and workers. So far has this gone that at the present time the principal energies of the Civic Federation seems to be turned against Socialism. This is as it should be. This forces the fight into the open. The dagger must now be exchanged for the bluoger a. The mask has been torn from the face of this deceptive organization. It now remains only to push the fight and the victory is ours.

You are not a member of the Himois Manufacturer. Association, and we carmeatly desire your conjectation. Please read the above letter carefully?

Not only read it but study it, note what it says, note who says it, then read it again to yourself and to your fellow worker! First, note that the Illinois Manufacturers' Association is composed of business men and that they appeal to members of their class. They do not send these letters to working people. They are "class conscions a Second, note what they have done through the control of the

Legislature

Third, note what they have defeated through the same means, Fourth, note their attitude on the labor question.

Fifth, note who these men are. (1) This letter proves the truth of the Socialist claim, that the interests of the laborers and the capitalists are NOT THE SAME. These men would denounce the Socialists for teaching that there is a "class struggle," but in this letter they not only recognize it, but they plead with those on the outside-"non-umon" capitalists, so to speak -to join the association and assist in the fight to protect their capitalistic interests. They understand the value of united action and we admire them

(2) When they want something done they do not enforce their demands by physical force, "educational" committees or strikes.

They do it in a "legal" manner, that is, they make the laws, they interpret the laws, they execute the laws and they punish the "law breakers," because they see to it that MEMBERS OF THEIR CLASS ARE ELECTED TO THE LEGISLATURE. TO THE JUDICIARY AND TO THE EXECUTIVE OFFICES!

They do not go begging for legislation from members of the working class, but they order legislation enacted by members of their Own class. How different from the action of the working class! This class, in their ignorance, help to elect "business" men into power and then come "begging" for legislation, only to be sent away empty-handed or given a stone instead of bread.

And we pity our fellow workers for their ignorance.

(3) By the same "legal" means they defeat what would be harmful to the'r interests. For an illustration notice how they killed the "fellow s rvants" bill in the last Legislature, and in this letter they admit having defeated "many measures unfriendly to the commercial and manufacturing interests."

Now let some of our labor "leaders" explain how the "interests of capital and labor" are identical.

These capitalists know better and act accordingle.

From the above it will be seen, that "laws" are simply enactments, made by the ruling class to protect its interests, and any one who dares to oppose them will be punished, even though he may suffer under

Now let us reverse the case and suppose that the laboring men had sense enough, as they will some day, to elect members of their own class to the Legislature, to the bench and to the executive offices.

They would then enact laws favorable to their class.

They would defeat laws unfavorable to their interests.

And if any one dared to oppose them, the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, for instance, he would be made to suffer the consequences of being "a law breaker."

It all depends on which

on which fellow holds the whip,

Hitherto the workers have been content to be at the wrong end of the whin.

(4) The teamsters found this out to their sorrow, because the "attitude" and the "influence" of such men as the members of the Manufacturers' Association was exerted in the "right direction." The policemen's club, the repeating rifles and the injunctions were always pointed at the strikers.

If the working people had had the power to point these the other way there would have been no need of a strike.

A strike is a crude weapon and usually reacts on its authors. But with the control of the political powers in their hands, backed up by the police, repeating rifles, and injunctions, the workers would not need to beg, BUT COULD COMMAND! Fellow workers, which shall it be?

(5) Note who and what these men are.

You will find than they belong to both the Republican and the Democratic parties, for "business" ignores party lines and either party is equally their servant. Some of them are very prominent in this city and other cities of Illinois, and some of them are notoriously so, as, for instance, Conkey, the "scab" printer, and Selz of prison labor fame.

Fred W. Upham is one of the leading Republicans, president of a lumber company, but his main business just now is to help corporations crape with light taxes, while the poor man's property is taxed the limit. No doubt he posed as a "friend of labor" when he ran for office. In this letter he shows his proper color and he also shows what the Republican party thinks of labor.

The leaders of the Republican party looks on the laboring men with utter contempt.

The Democratic party looks upon them as on a sponge to be squeezed. And the laboring men are themseives to blame.

This is not written in condemnation of the Manufacturers' Association. Far from it. These gentlemen know enough to take care of their own interests. Would that the laborers, and especially the labor unions, would imitate them!

They would then quit their suicidal actions of supporting political parties, which belong to their enemies, and join with the Socialists to capture the political power!

Will the laboring class ever learn to use the ballot right? Have they had lessons enough or must they be clubbed, injunctioned and starved some more?

The fall election will show,

And, by the way, let me impress on my fellow workers this fact, that there is no more important election than a judicial. 'We have become a nation ruled by the court. And we ought to put our own men

And let it once for all be understood, that any labor "leuder" who will favor, or any labor union which will endorse, or any laboring man, except a fool, who will vote the same ticket with the above-named "gentlemen," are and ought to be denounced as TRAITORS TO THEIR CLASS!

A STORY, BY BERTHA S. WILKINS.

"This is all so new to me," Burnham protested. "You must give me time before I commit myself.

She was looking down at the babe asleep in her arms, "See how her face is filling out! she observed: "In a few weeks she will be plump—a heautiful child. When I see a sleeping habe I believe in guardian angels!"

"It was her mother's last word-a promise to guard her," Burnham said, intently studying the baby face.

Gertrude Canther's eyes were filling again. "My instinct would be the same," she began, "but I've extended my motherhood to want all children guarded. Think of these tender baby arms doing twelve hours of hard work for a pittauce; the haby desire for play and gladness, in harness to the call of 'Cash' or to the factory whistle at 5 o'clock in the marning. Doesn't it make your blood boil to think of this modern Moloch. We bury our little children in dangeons like those of the middle ages! Is chivalry dead? Does the green old earth bring forth no royal natures to-day Burnham's hand supported his head; yet she felt that he was intent upon every word that she spoke,

"This industrial warrare or ours," she went on, "is a period like the dark ages of history. Our workers to-day are robbed of their very lives, our women are degraded bodily and industrially, our children have no food, no clothes, no joys; all the weak and helpless ones of the world are ruthlessly trampled down. But in these dark ages of capitalism, we see the dawn of a new chivalry. As the brave knights of old protected the weak and did battle for the defenseless ones, so the worker-knights of the new chivalry are preparing to make impos-She turned to the side the injustice and the cruelty of our day. "Oh, it will be a glorious time when this diabolical struggle for the merest necessities of life is over. This barren country be a garden, a park ringing with the activities of a race so noble that out highest ideals would langle discords in their harmonies"

"That's a beautiful dream, Mrs. Conther," Burnham interposed. rousing himself. You'd have to change himan nature, and that is

"What do you mean by fournan nature" ?" she asked

Well, it's schishness-that's about the size of it," he answered. Why, that's the very cornerstone of our philosophy," she con-We don't intend to do away with selfishness. Upon the wise selfishness, or self-interest of the great producing class, the cooperative commonweach will be builded as upon a rock.

The civilization of competition is resting upon the selfishness of a hundred men-a small controlling class; the eighty millions are mere grist for their mill of death. But the selfishness of the few must yield to that of the millions you think in dollars not in human lives. But the eighty millions are clamoring for recognition and capitalism must make way for collectivism. This is my solution of the labor problem. Mr. Burnham. What is your solution?"

"I've always contended for a carefully adjusted system of arbi-

"We've passed that 'Velvet Glove and Iron Hand' stage," she answered. "I realized the change on that dark night when Mr. Gunther was arrested on the street without a warrant. They raided our ocoperative stores where we women were hard at work distributing supplies. It is the iron hand without the velvet from now on to free-

His eyes wavered as they met hers.

On the night of his arrest, a comrade brought me a message from my husband urging me to leave town with baby. Refore I could get things together, they were surrounding our house. They broke in the door and walked into my room. I can't tell you how it feels-this being at the mercy of rufhans. The comrade started down with me carrying my satchel. 'Allow me to carry this for her,' he pleaded, when the leader stopped him.

- you, this is a hen-party. You clear out!" When I had baby in one arm and my heavy satchel in the other, they marched me over the frozen ground toward the station. Other women joined me. We passed Sallie Morgan's cabin. She was about to become a other. I knew, and I trembled as for the safety of a young sister. We had planned for her little one, together. I had given her all of my haby's tiny clothes and had promised to be with her as a trained nurse. Fred Morgan, her husband, had been taken to the bull-pen a few days before for the crime of working in a co-operative store—that was my crime, too,

"The cabin-door was open as we passed. Only Sallie's old father was with her. We heard the coarse Jokes of the ruffians and the old man's pleading voice. Mr. Burnham, those hirelings of yours carried the dear child out into the snow on a bit of a mattress because your company wanted the house, they said. That night Sallie died. Her old father wrote me her last message. She had whispered it to him as she lay dying with her dead baby in her arms." Burnham was looking out of the window, brokenly

"Mr. Burnham," she went on almost sternly, "is that your solu-tion of the labor problem? Then in Heaven's name let the streets run red! It's better for the workers to die fighting than rotting. As a tigress fights for her young, so could I fight for my babe; and not for mine alone, but for yours as well—for any child. I can feel the blood of my Teuton mothers rushing in my veins. I know how they felt facing their enemies by the side of their men. But times have changed It was a fair fight then -we are disa med to-day. Your men are armed and ready to use their guas. Mr. Burnham, what can we do, what is there left for us to do but to origanize on the industrial and on the political field so that we may work together and so that we can vote together. We will vote that human hie, its safety, its gladness shall be the foundation of our government. That property shall be man's servant, not his master. What will Fred Morgan do when he leaves your bull-pen a homeless wanderer? In one way, your experience and he were similar. The loss of the mother in your case was inevitable. All that science and human skill could do was done for your wife. But put yourself into Fred Morgan's place when he hears the farewell message which his young wife sent him as she lay dying in the cold,

Burnham groaned aloud as he turned to the window.
"Socialists do not stand for using dynamite," she went on. "We oppose all killing even by wholesale on the battlefield. But think of the self-restraint accessary for Fred Morgan to overcome the impulse to revenge the wanton murder of his child-wife and babe. Think of the patience we need to subdue the impulse to wild action and to let the great plan work out as a flower becomes a ripened fruit?"

Burnham's head was bowed upon his hand,
"They had freight cars for Denver on the track," she went on, with her story. "About twenty-five of the men to be deported were in one of these cars. With curses and insinuations too vile to repeat, e were hustled toward the car. A gray-haired Irishman held out his hands to take my baby.

'I'm not airaid of men who strike for liberty and fair play?' I said. For this remark I received a stinging blow upon my arm. It turned me sick for a moment; then I thanked the kind fate which had protected my breast.

"A more gentlemanly group of men I have never met than were these rough miners, huddled in that freight-car.

"This is not civilization, poor gal," said the old man as I took my baby. "This is divilization. Ther's not a mother's son of us but would have took your part when you was sthruck if it would have been out's to do at the risk of our lives.' He was right. It was more heroic for those men to restrain themselves than it would have been to act in a one-sided attempt at revenge. Those brave men of the mountains have faced danger with steady eyes every day in the mines, and of such stuff heroes are made.

"We women were taken off at Denver and left free to shift for ourselves. The men were taken on to Kansas and left loose on the prairie. I lived in a Denver rooming house nine weeks, until the glad night just twelve days ago when I was awakened by a gentle knock at my door. It was my husband, looking like a tramp. He had escaped from your pen!" She leaned back, smiling, her eyes shining up at Burnham, with a glad light in them, "He is mine again, well and loyal, and true as ever, more true—there used to be something between us!" she paused, smiling.

"And that was" asked Burnham, fascinated.

"Tobacco," she laughed. "I was jealous of the Lady Nicotine." she went on, archly smiling. "Many times I had decided that it would be easier for Phil Gunther to get along without his wife or without his haby than without his smoking. You know, men can face cannons easier than give up such a habit. But you didn't offer him eigars in "We women were taken off at Denver and left free to shift for the pen as you do now. Then he would not have refused them, but now he says that as long as a child is hungry, the ten dollars shall feed a child each month. Do you understand now, why I did not care to live in your mansion, Mr. Burnham?"

He looked into her face with smiling eyes. I know that Cumher is the man of all my acquaintances, most to be enview-that I know," he answered, irrelevantly. "Of all the men I know, rich or poor, Gunther is certainly the most to be envied!"
"Oh, I'm'to be envied," she said, her color rising. "I'm proud of my brave knight of labor!"

At Burlington a messenger delivered a telegram to Phil Gunther.

He opened it and read: Mr. and Mrs. Phil Gumber, Burlington train to Chicago:

Dear Comrades: Will board your train at union station, Chicago. Received notice of your coming from a Denver friend. Quarters all ready for you. It you see an old white-baired woman that's me. Margaret Elliott."

"Isn't this splendid!" Gertrude exclaimed, when Burnham entered the car. "A comrade is to meet us at Chicago, and she has quarters all read; for us; an old woman she says she is. I'm so relieved to think of having a place to go to !! Her face glowed with cuthusiasm, as she added, "Don't you see what this great movement means to us workers, Mr. Burnham?

Gunther searched Eurnham's face suspiciously, but he was puzzled. Burnham was either innocent of collusion or a consummate "Yes, Mrs. Gunther," he said, smiling into the pink face of his baby, "that word 'comrade' means something to you, Freemasoury isn't in it with your movement!" "The furniture and the piano in this little flat belong to my daughter," Mrs. Elliott was saying as she led the little family into their new home. "I pay the rent for her. It is eighteen dollars per month. This is Comrade Rose Clark," she said, introducing a pleasant, energetic young woman. "She has often helped me with my work and is willing to help you."

When they had gathered around the table to enjoy Comrade Rose's dinner together, Mrs. E"jott remarked, "By the way, Comrade Gunther, you said something about going out to find a job to-morrow. I want you to try this firm,

Why, I'll be glad to; there's nothing to do here." Gonther said, "i espected to hustle for just such a little place as this is, but with Comrade Rose here I am free to turn matters domestic over to the ladies and get right down to business myself."
"This is a very good firm," she said, passing him a card. "My boy lack learned his machinist's trade with them some years ago when he was studying electrical engineering.

Burnham called next cevaing. The two men were sitting on the back porch near the hammock, in which the two babies lay asleep.

Through the open window the two men could hear an animated discussion on the fine points of each of the babies as the cishes rattled well, I called at the office of the Michigan Iron Works to-day,

Gunther began, "and I got an A No. 1 job!"
"Wb., that's fore; what's the work?" Burnham asked, imocently. Never mind about that detail," Gunther said. "Of course the lass is delighted. She's been sugging all afternoon. She thinks Heath, the manager, was imbued with second-sight and that he saw my surpassing usefulness to his company shining from the very pores of my skin." He storped, laughing "I do enjoy a joke on that girl," he went on. "You've gotten ahead of her on tricks, Burnham, she's complotely fooled. You've played your bluff to a finish-out you haven't patient wool over my eyes?

The trial has been on for several days, but wing to the fact that almost all the men called to act as jurors so far have been rejected by one side or the other for cause (prejudice) the task of selecting a jury has not proceeded far.

PEOPLE ARE LAZY.

BY CHARLES H. KERR.

This is one of the unabsputed things said in 'such a the defenders of capitalism. They give it as a reeson why the laborers should be kept in some kind of slavery.

I am calling it an undisputed thing, that is I am admitting the charge. But not to be misunderstood, I will define what I mean by the admission I mean that as a rule people prefer to get the things they want with just as little unpleasant exection as possible.

I admit the charge because I believe it is true. I knew I get in that way myself, and so do all my friends, so far as I have observed

Moreover, all the history I have read seems to indicate that people always have preferred to act in that way-or at least the more intelligent

For example, when a mowing machine was invented, the lasy farmers began using it, and after a while their competition brought down the price or hay to a joint where the good conservative industrious farmers who had stuck to the scythe found they could no longer make a living with it, so they had to use the machine too.

I can remember a time when all good, industrious women used to knit stockings for their relatives and deplore the laziness of the women who didn't knit, but the increasing cheapness of the machine khall lossery has made knitting by hand a lost art,

Always and everywhere, if there are two ways to do a thing, people finally settle on the casier way,

Machines, railroads, trusts, all have come to stay because people are too lazy to keep on doing things in the harder ways that were the fushion before the machines and railreads and trusts were invented. But who thinks it is wrong to be lacy, and why does by think so?

It is the man who fives on the labor of some one else, offer by owning him, or by owning the land he works on or the tools he works with The owner is like any one cise; he likes in get the things he wants with as little unpleasant exertion as possible. Now to get them from the labor of some one size is an ideal way from the owners point of case, and the more he can get from the labor of each slave, the better for the lewiser. But now comes a conflict of interests. The slave water though to dat and wear, and can only get them by working for the master. But the slave is large in other words, he does not want to do may more were then enough would the master come in? So it is evidently for the inaster's interest to teach the same that laziness is wrong, such that the only way to be happy in the life and after leath is to be industrious. And as the masters control nears of the monte of education, they have made many stares believe that largess is wrong to produce the things he needs. But if he did no more than that, where

So the slaves have gene on working. They have worked so hard that they have made better and better machinery; they have extrast how to use it so as to give the greatest results; they have made the owners so wealthy that it has become quite needless for them'to do my work them-selves; the slaves are supplying not only the muscle but the brain power to run the most effective means ever known for producing everything that everybody wants.

And now the slaves are beginning to think. They realize that they are filling the owners' warehouses with a perplexing surplus of -verything to eat and voice, while they and their shilldess are dangerously near starvation. They realize that they are working only two hours a day for them-selves, and six or eight or ten hours more for their imasters. And as they realize this, their natural takiness asserts were. They see an easier way to get what they want, and they are going to do things that They are uniting all over the world, into the international Socialist party, the object of which is for the people who do the work to take hold of the government of each country and run it to suit themselves The governments have been run to enable the owners to keep the workers in good order, teach them industry and economy, so, like off their

The governments are going to be transformed into consecutive establishments for combining the labor of all the workers as effectively as pos-and giving the workers all they earn. When people get all they earn, no one will need to worry over whether his neighbor is tany or not. There will no doubt be some who will prefer to work eight hours a day all the year round for the sake of extra material comforts. There will be others who will prefer to live more simply for the sake of a greater amount of leisure for the things they like best to do Those will be questions that the people will settle for the coveres, and not elect officers to settle for them.

But for the benefit of those who know that we can't change human as ture, and who fear that if the laborers were made free they might do nothing but cat, drink and sleep, I want to tell of an actual experiment that

In the fifth century before the Christian em, after the Persian fleet had been driven back from the coast of Greece never to return the city of Athens became the head of a confederacy of Greek States intended to keep the sea clear of hostite ships. Gradually the confederacy became an empire; Athens furnished the ships and the men, while the other States put up the money. Athens rapidly grew, until it became a city of 90,000 free citizens, together with at least four times as many aliens and slaves.

There were freemen and slaves eisewhere, but usually the owning class in each city was a small one. The unique and interesting thing about Athens was that in this one city for about a hundred and fifty years there was a large body of citizens so situated that they did not have to wark long hours and did not have to worry about where their food was coming

Now if the defenders of capitalism were correct in their theories, the result ought to have been that the Atheniaus would have become stupid and brutal. But as a matter of fact, in this one city at this one time we find the most intense intellectual life that the world has ever known. Models of literature and art were produced there and then that are still unequalled and in the great open-air theaver thirty thousand Athenium used to gather regularly to listen to tragedles that called for too much intellect on the part of the listeners to make them acceptable to any large audience under modern empitalism. That is the way the lazy Athenians used their leisure.

We are going to try the same experiment on a larger scale, with machinery and railroads in place of slaves and tributaries. If you are afraid vote for the capitalists.

"The Gambler" will be the attrac-tion at the Columbus theater for one week, beginning Sunday matinee, Sept. 24. This play comes direct from its York City, where it was witnessed by authors and managers and was pro-nounced to be one of the season's best

The Democrats and Republicans announce that they will soon open the Judicial and Drainage Board campaign. They are devoting the snost of their energies just at present devising ways to raise campaign funds.

vising ways to case campaign funds.

The Republican Saultary candidates have been assessed $2,000, $1,200 and $400 for the five year, three year, and one year term respectively. The Democrats have a cheaper lot of candidates. They will pay only $1,000 for five year men $500 for three year men and $200 for one year men. It has not yet been admounced what the Socialist candidates will contribute to their party's campaign fund, but judging from the past it is Macly to be anywhere from fifty cents to $5 and no end of hard work.

The Georgia Legislature has again defeated a child labor isw at the command of the cotton mill owners. The conditions under which the children work in Southern cotton mills is simply legalized murder and cannibalism in its most hideous form. The cannibals of savage times killed the bables at once and eat them. The modern Christian capitalist condenus them to years of torture and living death and exist and enjoys the result of the inhor of these helpless innocents. Hered and Pharaola være humane compared to the products of the modern competitive profit system.

A MOVING CITY.

One explanation of the light vote at e primaries last Saturday is the fact that a very large number of our party members had moved out of the ditriets where they and registered and for this reason were not entitled to vote at a primary.

Comrade Robbins, of the 28th Ward reports that he personally found that in four primary districts of that ward 26 of those who voted at the Social-ist primaries last spring had moved and were not entitled to vote. fourth district of the 21st Ward, eight men who had moved into that district and had voted at the Socialist primary last spring, called at the voting booth see if they were entitled to vote in the district where they now live with out first registering. Similar reports come from many parts of the city.

So it appears that the light vote at our primaries hast Saturday was not so much apathy on the part of the Socialist voters after all, but was largely due to the fact that they had ing their residence since the last regis

Some interesting information on the subject of the way the population of Chicago change their place of residence is furnished by the records of the gas company. These records show that more than 90,000 of their customers move during the month of May alone each year.

Socialists who were mable to vote at the primaries because of having moved since last registration should not fail to register in the district where they now live before the co ing judicial and sanitary election.
They should also urge all their acquaintances who voted the Socialist ticket and have moved since the last registration to do the same.

SHALL WE HOLD A NATIONAL CONVENTION IN 1906?

Shall the Socialist party hold a convention in 1906? Here at the Socialist headquarters, Socialism and most everything that pertains to its growth and welfare is discussed from every standpoint by the advocates of the different types of tactics. But no matter how much individuals and groups may differ on minor points, all are agreed that the present state of industrial and social development, and the inicovering of the universal existence of graft and rottenness in all lines of business, both public and private, is preparing the ground for the reception of the Socialist propaganda seed.

During one of these discussions the question of the tremendous opportunities and responsibilities of the Socialist party in this crisis was discussed at some length. Discussing as to the best methods of preparing our party to intelligently cope with and utilize to the greatest advantage the social and industrial terment that is already upsetting the calculations of the old party managers, it was suggested that it would be greatly to our advantage to hold a national convention of the Socialist party during the summer of 1906. Such a convention would be able to discuss and draw up a national platform for 1908, and give plenty of time for a thorough discussion among the party members and referendum vote on its adoption.

The holding of a national convention in 1906 will enable the Socialist party to make a national issue of two elections.

There is no longer any doubt that there will be a great rallying of the radical forces in the Democratic party, which, from all present indications, will once more get control of the machinery of that party. The insolence of the trusts, and the revelations of the methods of "frenzied finance" by Lawson, Ida Tarbell, Steffens, Russell and a host other middle-class journalists in the sensational magazines and Hearst papers, have thoroughly awakened the dying middle class to the seriousness of their condition.

It will be the task of the Socialist party, during the campaigns of 1906 and '08, to place clearly before the working class the fact that they are not interested in saving the middle class from extermination at the hands of the trusts and financial kings. This middle class, while no longer a great economic factor, is in possession of many of the organs of public information, and control largely the pulpit and college utterances in the small cities and towns. The holding of a national convention of the Socialist party in 1000 would work beneficially in more ways than one. It would enable our party to go before the voters of the nation with an official national statement twice instead of once. In reality the congressional election of 1000 is as much national in its character and general bearings as the presidential election in 1968 will be. Since the work of our party during campaigns is largely educational, and needs time to effectually soak into the slow-moving minds of the working class, the holding of a convention in 1006 will give us over two years to hammer the Socialist logic into their minds and show the utter impossibility of the real producers getting any substantial relief from the possible triumph at the polls of the reactionary radical Democrats or Republicans.

Another strong argument in favor of holding a national convention in 1006 is that it will give us plenty of time to thoroughly discuss and thrash out all internal party questions through the party press, and in the branches and locals before the convention of 1008. lowhere in the world are the conditions so ripe for the reception, by the masses, of the message of Socialism, as in this highly developed capitalistic nation. It will need all the wisdom, forethought and counsel of the best minds our party contains to so shape our party policy that we will be able to avail ourselves of every advantage that the ever-increasing rapidity of industrial development and concentration of

The Chicago Socialist is of the opinion that a national convention of our party in 1900 will greatly facilitaote the work which our partywill be called upon to do during the next two years.

PLAN FOR CLASSES.

.....845 00

Total douglious

Many comrades have been asking whether the study classes for Socialists would be conducted this year. In reply to these I would say that they will begun this year about the first of Janu are. According to present plans there will be but two evenings a week devoted to lectures. Two lectures will be given each evening, one on Socialism by May when evening, one on solution of an eri-can Industrial History by A. M. Simons. If a sufficient number of students so de-sire arrangements will be made for meet-ings of a class either another evening a week or during the day time for the discussion of assigned readings, presenta-tion of topics and general consideration of the subjects studied.

Since very many of the details will-depend upon the number of the students and their wishes in the matter it is im-portant that all those who are considering attendance notify the undersigned at once—A. M. Simons, 56 Fifth avenue, Chicago.

THE END OF THE WORLD.

Heavenly bodies share the common let of all combinations of matter; like plants and animals, they are born, grow up to maturity, produce seed and die. In THE END OF THE WORLD Dr. M. Wilhelm Meyer shows how, in the normal course of things, a world like our own having reached the acme of its development, de-clines slowly in old age and ultimately dies after producing in its interior the seed of a new world. Of course, in rare abnormal cases, such a heavenly body may meet with a premature end, just as an untimely death occasionally befalls plants or animals. Every one knows that nature protects living creatures in a thousand different ways against premature death, but it is not so generally known that her solicitude for the preservation of heavenly bodies is even greater. It is simstartling to learn, for example, what effective protection the earth's atmosphere affords against the invasien of courets and meteors, those in-truders from outer space which have aroused the fears of mankind from time immemorial.

To the unscientific mind, the thought of the end of the world is pregnant with terrors; Dr. Meyer's little book dissipates all these fears. True, a premature death MAY overwhelm the earth, but the chances are overwhelmingly against it. Any one of us may come to a violent, untimely end, but few of us are so irrational as to feel uneasy over such a bare possibility. And as for the inevitable death from old age, this comes as a release to the wornout workl, just as to the wornout individual. Moreover, when a world (or indeed any combination of matter) ends, it is, of course, only the form of organization that is dissolved. The matter and energy of the universe are indestructible; these survive through all world-deaths. When one orb dies, out of its ashes, phoenix-like. a new and more perfect world arises. It is only the narrow egotism of ignorance that depleres the necessity of death. One generation of men, whose ideas were formed under economic conditions that have passed away, is superseded by a new generation whose ideas are the result of changed economic conditions and who can therefore carry forward the progressive development of society. So, too, the present generation of works must pass away, to be followed by more perfect worlds. To quote the author's closing sentence: "Everything that exists subserves the All. Disaster, and, in the highest degree, death are things necessary and salutary in the evolution of the uni-verse. In higher knowledge, death is more and more stripped of its terrors." THE END OF THE WORLD will be published early in October. It has been admirably translated into English by Margaret Wagner, and will be printed, illustrated and bound uniformly with the other volumes of the Li-BRARY OF SCIENCE FOR THE WORKERS.

SCIENCE AND REVOLUTION.
This is an original work by Ernest Entermann, which will also be published early in October, and will be the fourth volume of the same library. It differs from the other volumes in the library in this, that while they give the facts which have been brought to light by modern science, Comrade Untermann's work gives the meaning of those facts and their relation to the Socialist movement. In his forthcom-ing book, SCIENCE AND REVOLUing book, SCIENCE AND REVOLU-TION, he not only shows that the So-cialist philosophy is the logical out-come of modern science, he also makes a new and important contribution to the development of that philosophy.

Mechanically the book will be like the other volumes of the library, except that, while it will not be illustrated, it will contain more pages than any of the rest. The price will be fifty

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE

It was in May that we began the publication of the Library of Science for the workers with THE EVOLUTION OF MAN. This is now in its fourth thousand and is seiling as fast as ever. The second volume, GERMS OF MIND IN PLANTS, was published at the beginning of September. It is full of important evidence in of scientific Socialism, yet it is easy and simple in its style. We have just described the third and fourth volumes, and the fifth, THE TRIUMPH OF LIFE, by the author of THE EVOLUTION OF MAN, will be ready early in November.

The publication of these five books involves an outlay of nearly two thous-and dollars, and while the books are certain to have a large sale in time, it is a serious problem to raise the money required by the time it will be needed. The authorized capital of our co-operative publishing house is $50,000, but of this only $12,450 has thus far been subscribed, and nearly all of this has come from outside Chicago. A share of stock costs ten dollars. We prefer, of course, to have it paid for in full when subscribed for, but where this is not possible, it may be paid for in monthly installments of one

The stock draws no dividends, but it carries the privilege of buying books at cost. For example, these fifty cent books described in this column can be bought by stockholders at 25 cents each in this office or 30 cents each if mailed. If you spend even a dollar a year for ooks the saving amounts to ten per ent on your investment.

But the main reason why you sho take stock is to make sure that the right kind of Socialist literature is cir-

The triumph of Socialism will come when chough members of the working class know what Socialism means. They can only know it through the study of Socialist literature. There are various ways in which this literature warions ways in which this interactive might have been provided, but our co-operative publishing house is for the United States life channel through which it is being provided. Would you give ten dollars to have Socialism come?
